Green Insists Lewis' Group Be Dissolved; Split Widens

Rebels' Chiefs Adamant in Refusal to Answer Call to Hearing.

Action Postponed By Labor Council

Receives Formal Plea to Suspend Unions in Trades Dispute.

By Felix Bruner.

While still expressing hope that the breach in the ranks of organized labor would be closed, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared last night that nothing short of dissolution of the Committee for Industrial Organization would satisfy his group.

Officials of unions affiliated with the committee, headed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, continued their refusal to appear before the federation's executive council. A formal request that these unions be suspended for forming a rival organization of the federation was received by the council.

The council will meet again Monday to give the rebel unions another opportunity to be heard, but it is expected to decide before the end of the week the course of its immediate action. There were these possibilities:

1. A compromise which might take the form of appointment of a committee to make a further study of the situation.

Suspension of Unions.

2. Suspension of the unions affiliated with the Lewis organization, which would mean operation of two powerful labor groups instead of one and the loss of more than 1,000,000 members to the A. F. of L.

3. Delay of a solution with submission of the question at the next federation convention.

The formal request that the recalcitrant unions be suspended came from John P. Frey, head of the metal trades department of the federation, representing all of the metal trades unions.

Meanwhile, Secretary Perkins expressed the "sincere hope" that differences within the federation might be settled in a "constructive manner." She made no suggestion as to how this settlement might be brought about.

Out of Controversy.

Miss Perkins at the same time emphasized that the Labor Department is keeping out of the controversy between the Lewis group and steel manufacturers over organization of labor in the steel industry. She said she did not think a strike or a lockout in the industry would be "necessary or inevitable" and that there was nothing for the Labor Department to do in the present situation.

Unions which failed to answer the summons of the A. F. of L. council yesterday were the Ladies Garment Works and the International Typographical Union. On the previous day the United Mine Workers of America and the United Textile Workers failed to appear. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers have been summoned to appear Monday, but there is no expectation that they will do so.

Members of the council, because of the heat, moved their meeting from the headquarters of the federation to the air-cooled "gold room" of a hotel. There they sat all day around a table awaiting the arrival of invited "guests" who had no intention of appearing. Much of their time was used in discussing the Frey request, but no effort was made to reach a final conclusion.

Suspension Demanded.

One of the charges is that the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, which is trying to organize the steel industry under the Lewis committee, has been attempting to draw into its organization the members of other federation unions.

Frey said in his formal demand for suspension:

"The activities of the C. I. O. have materially affected the organizing work carried on by the international unions affiliated with the metal trades department. Trade unionists are being informed by representatives of the C. I. O., whether through direct instructions of the C. I. O. or not, that there is to be a new form

President Quits Capital to Rest On Maine Coast

Will Stop in New York for Bridge Dedication; to Visit in Canada.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt headed northward out of the Capital's sizzling heat last night, bound for a two-weeks' vacation cruise on the Maine coast to prepare him for the campaigning ahead.

The air-cooled train carried him northward after a busy day clearing up pressing Governmental business before his departure late at night.

Another full day awaited the President today. He will dedicate the $64,000,000 Tri-Borough Bridge in New York at noon; go by train to Hyde Park to be guest of honor at a Roosevelt Home Club celebration in the afternoon and later attend the wedding of Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen.

Secretary Ickes will accompany the President to Hyde Park after dedication of the gigantic Tri-Borough Bridge, crossing the East River to connect Manhattan, Queens and the Bronx. It is a PWA project.

Monday night the Chief Executive will leave Hyde Park by train for Maine, where he will embark Tuesday on the 56-foot schooner Sewanna, with three of his sons, for two weeks of cruising and fishing off the coast of Maine and Nova Scotia. His sons, James, John and Franklin, jr., will accompany their father.

Toward the end of July the President plans to bring the cruise to an end at Campobello Isle, New Brunswick, where he and his mother maintain summer homes. After a day or two there he will leave by train for Quebec, where he will visit with Lord Tweedsmuir, governor general of Canada, July 31.

The President will be met at Quebec by the Governor General and other officials, and escorted to the Citadel. After a luncheon given for him by the Governor General, Lord Tweedsmuir will take the President for a drive around the Canadian city. They will return to the Citadel for tea before the President entrains for Hyde Park.

Mr. Roosevelt's plans for after his return to Hyde Park were still indefinite tonight. He said today he did not expect to do much campaigning during August.

About the middle of August he will head West for an inspection of the drought regions in Minnesota and the Dakotas.

Callers yesterday included Gov. James M. Culey of Massachusetts, Joseph B. Eastman, of the Interstate Commerce Commission; Barron Collier, an associate in the New York Boy Scout Foundation; Secretary Ickes and Lucille F. McMillin, of the Civil Service Commission.

The Chief Executive spent the afternoon clearing up his correspondence and disposing of other routine matters.

Roosevelt Signs Leaves Order; Rules Clarified

U. S. Workers' Provisions Put on Uniform Basis for First Time.

Placing Government leave provisions on a uniform basis for the first time, under authority granted by the last Congress, President Roosevelt yesterday signed an executive order setting forth regulations under which the new vacation and sick leave laws are to be administered.

The rules, on the whole, constitute a liberal interpretation of the law, which fixes the annual leave at 26 days and the sick leave at 15 days, with an accumulative privilege up to 90, including a 30-day allowance for emergencies.

President Roosevelt held that this 30-day leave could be granted only three times a year because of the accumulative limit to 90 days. As to the regular sick leave, Government employes accumulate it at the rate of one day and a quarter a month. If an application is made, however, for a sick leave in excess of that accumulated the additional time is chargeable to leave without pay unless circumstances justify an advancement.

Employes who are sick for three days or less at a time need not obtain a physician's certificate, the rules provide, but this privilege is extended only four times a year.

If an illness of five days or more occurs while an employe is on vacation, the time may be charged against sick leave.

Sick leave is granted in maternity cases and in instances where the Girl Flier Escapes Again From Death

Indianapolis, July 10 (AP).—For the second time within a week Jacqueline Cochran Odlum, noted woman flier, today brushed wings with death, her speedy racing plane nosing over and tearing the engine from the fuselage as she landed at Municipal Airport after a false start for New York.

A big T. W. A. airliner, coming into the port just missed the wreckage of her plane by a few feet, disappearing for a moment in the cloud of dust raised as it settled to a landing.

Mrs. Odlum, who only a few minutes before had announced her marriage to Floyd B. Odlum, president of the Atlas Corporation and an aviation enthusiast, stepped from the plane uninjured and shortly took off for New York in the airliner which had just missed her.

Just seven days ago the engine of the same plane caught fire as she was over the city and she landed it in flames at 125 miles an hour. That time she suffered only a slight sprain of her left ankle as she leaped from the cockpit.

Women Jeer, Threaten Mother Seized for Cruelty to Babies

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 10.—Wrathful women threatened and jeered a young mother today as policemen told of finding her two baby sons virtual prisoners, frantic from heat and thirst, in an airless, top-floor room. One child was tied with a dog collar and a rope.

Mrs. Marion Shanks, small, blonde woman of 29, only smiled mirthlessly when Magistrate Edward J. Holland asked for an explanation. He had to warn a tense crowd to maintain order. Then he held the mother and her companion, William Davis, 39, in $800 bail each for court on charges of cruelty to children. A cry of "killer" or "kill her" rang out in the crowded police court room.

Sergt. Frank Harkins and Patrolman Herbert Walker told of forcing their way into the house after neighbors told them of hearing the children's pitiful cries.

"As soon as I got in the room," Walker testified, "the older child (John, 4) cried: 'Water, water, gimme a drink.' I got some water before I set him free and both of the babies drank two cups as quick as they could gulp them down."

Charles, 2, was crying in his crib. John was in the crib, too, Sergt. Harkins said, held by a dog collar to which a rope was tied. The rope was fastened near the floor.

Walker told the magistrate "conditions in the room were terrible. There was only one window and that was open a few inches and was covered with chicken wire. It was so hot you could hardly breathe."

As the policemen told of previous complaints of the mother's treatment of the children, angered women in the crowd cried out.

The magistrate said, "This is the most pathetic case I have ever seen in all my experience as a magistrate."

Miss Lillian Peachey, agent of the Society to Protect the Children From Cruelty, testified two other children of the woman were being cared for by others. The magistrate gave her the custody of the two little boys.

Wheat Crop Won't Reach U. S. Figure

Estimate, Compiled Prior to Heat Wave, Gives Optimistic Picture.

Western Farms Parched Eighth Straight Day as Mercury Soars.

By Sidney Olson.

The wheat fields of the West baked browner yesterday as the millions of acres ruined by the sun passed through their eighth consecutive day of 100-degree temperatures.

The 5,000,000 farmers who stood hopelessly watching their crops wither and die found no consolation in the unexpectedly optimistic crop estimate of the Government, released yesterday, which put the entire wheat crop at 638,399,000 bushels, about 15,000,000 more than last year's slender crop.

Untold damage has occurred, however, since these figures were reported from the fields to Washington, as they are dated July 1. The spring wheat crop, now withering in the relentless sun, was estimated at 126,314,000 bushels, a drop of about 23,000,000 bushels from last year's light crop.

Significant Figures.

The severity of the drought could be told from three significant figures. Of 24,500,000 acres seeded to spring wheat, only 13,184,000 remain on which wheat is growing. The five-year average is 20,414,000 acres of spring wheat.

Although this year's total wheat crop was estimated as slightly larger than last year's, the expected production would still be the fourth smallest wheat crop produced in this country since 1917. The smallest years were those of 1933, 1934 and 1935.

President Roosevelt yesterday set the final details of the drought-relief program in a half-hour conference with Rexford G. Tugwell, Resettlement Administrator, and Aubrey Williams, Assistant WPA Administrator.

16,500 Already at Work.

Previously, at his morning press conference, he had announced that 75,000 WPA jobs had been authorized in the drought area and that 16,500 men were already at work, with thousands being added daily.

Nine counties during the day were added to the list of 268 drought-stricken counties in nine States in which Federal relief activities will be concentrated.

An additional 20,000 jobs had been added to the original 55,000 announced by WPA to provide relief in drought areas in the Southern and Southwestern States.

The increasing misery in the Nation's wheatlands was reflected in the bounding prices in the Chicago markets, as the drought ate steadily into the potential food supply of the country. The worry over the more-or-less safe corn crop showed in a 4-cent price rise, the limit allowed in the market in a day's trading.

Corn for December delivery stood at 77½ cents per bushel. All cereals were higher, with wheat in Chicago going up 3¼ cents a bushel.

Corn Can Be Saved.

The critical period for corn is in the next seven days, experts agree. Rains in that time can save the crop which thus far has been existing on moisture sucked from the subsurface. However, private advices already are definite that Iowa's corn crop will total only a 60 per cent average.

Civic prayers for rain here and there in the Dakotas showed the rising fear in those areas. Only the Government can provide food and clothing for thousands of these farmers, whose last resources have been wiped out by the successively severe droughts of 1934 and this year. Cash and credit is exhausted, experts point out, and the morale that supported thousands throughout the 1934 disaster has now been wiped out along with their finances, it is held.

Gov. Walter Welford of North Dakota said yesterday, in wiring a new appeal for aid to President Roosevelt:

"With the drought increased in severity, the situation is more critical than I can possibly describe."

He said that not only feed, but even water is lacking in many areas in his State, and previously self-sustaining farmers are now being forced to fall back on the RA and WPA for aid in their extremity.

The conservative estimates of the drought's damage to crops thus far this year settled on $300,000,000 as a likely figure yesterday. Four days ago these sources would admit no more than $150,000,000 in damage

Addis Ababa Radio Of U. S. Is Silenced

By the Associated Press.

Cornelius Van H. Engert, American Minister to Ethiopia, reported to the State Department yesterday that Italian authorities had ordered the American legation to close its radio station for 15 days.

Secretary Hull said the American Government was considering the situation and that Minister Engert had complied with the order. The minister stated he had obtained permission to receive messages from Washington over the radio, but had agreed not to send out dispatches.

The minister said the Italians had also ordered the British, French and German governments to close their radio stations for the time being.

The American radio station at Addis Ababa, operated by United States Navy operators at the legation, was set up at the beginning of the Ethiopian-Italian war.

A thundershower broke over sweltering Washington late last night, dropping the temperature 10 degrees in two hours and bringing temporary relief after the heat had claimed two lives and the mercury had reached a maximum of 105, but 1 degree below the all-time record set here in 1930.

One of the victims, a well dressed, middle-aged woman, died in an ambulance en route to a hospital after she collapsed in front of 3101 Twenty-fourth street northwest. She had not been identified late last night.

Seeking relief in the waters of the Potomac River, Jack Shockey, 23, of 941 Pollard street, Clarendon, Va., was drowned late yesterday. He and a friend, Marvin Johnson, of the same address, went swimming on the Virginia side. Johnson told police he heard his friend cry for help, then sink in the eddies before he could reach him. Harbor police were dragging for his body early today.

Breeze Off River.

The rain cooled parched roofs and was accompanied by a cooling breeze that came from the river.

During the storm a lightning bolt struck a drain pipe on the side of the police headquarters building. Damage was negligible. The same bolt caused a short circuit on the first floor of the Municipal Court Building. The resulting blaze was quickly extinguished.

The storm dispersed thousands of Washingtonians seeking relief from the heat in the Capital's parks.

When the lightning began to flash and the thunder rumbled there was a hurried exodus in automobiles, and soon the crowds, fleeing in the wake of the storm, became a major traffic problem.

Those men and women who did not come to the parks in automobiles took shelter beneath the trees.

After the rain abated, Rock Creek Park, Hains Point and other principal parks were all but deserted in contrast to their previous crowded condition.

City Rain Unique.

Washington was singularly fortunate because the thunder and lightning, which for an hour before the first drops of rain had been promising a shower, were in contrast with the plight of other cities throughout the heat belt, according to the Weather Bureau. Elsewhere there was only light rainfall which scarcely dried the dust or there were only dry storms with no precipitation.

But the weatherman could hold out little hope for today and tomorrow, and further expressed a belief that welcome as the shower was it would be only a casual respite. To-

Ruth Bryan Owen Will Marry Today

New York, July 10 (AP).—Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, Minister to Denmark, will be married tomorrow in the vaulted Episcopal Church at Hyde Park, N. Y., to Capt. Boerge Rohde, of the Danish King's court, with President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt looking on.

The vows in the international romance will be read by the Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker, rector of New York City's Calvary Episcopal Church, at 4 p. m. (Eastern standard time). The President and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at a wedding supper.

Mrs. Owen, who could assume the feminine counterpart to her husband's title, Kammerjunkare—gentleman in waiting to King Christian X—said she would continue to sign herself "Ruth Bryan Owen" in her official and literary work.

The daughter of William Jennings Bryan, first woman ministerial envoy of the United States to another country, made it definite that she would go back to Denmark to resume her duties after a wedding trip and a speaking tour electioneering for President Roosevelt.

Robert Lehman, Mrs. Owen's son-in-law and a cousin of Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York, will attend Capt. Rohde. Fannie Hurst, the novelist, was chosen matron of honor.

D. C. Woman Cites Mark of 124, Chief Brown Tests 120 Degrees.

Someone placed a thermometer on the sidewalk at Connecticut avenue and Porter street northwest. A crowd of perspiring citizens gathered to watch the mercury rise. At 2 p. m. it read 117.

And a few minutes later, a woman in the Cleveland Park section telephoned the Weather Bureau to say her thermometer broke after registering 124 degrees.

At Florida avenue and Eckington place northeast, a street car pulled a "plow." And 20 feet of sticky asphalt pavement were ripped up.

It seemed that everyone wanted to see how high the thermometer would go when placed in the sun. Even Police Chief Ernest W. Brown experimented. He stuck the meter outside his office window and it shot up to 120.

Mitchell, S. D., Citizens on Knees as Church Bells Sound.

Mitchell, S. Dak., July 10 (AP).—Business halted, merchants bent their heads and housewives knelt in supplication today as Mitchell's population prayed for rain.

The players rose from a drought-burned land to a cloudless sky and a blazing sun that had scorched relentlessly for days.

Bells in the city's 13 church towers tolled the people—11,000—to their knees while temperatures stood at 104 degrees.

No rain had fallen for more than a week. For seven days the mercury had risen above 100, and once to 114. Fields were burned brown. Farmers had turned to WPA labor.

The day of prayer was proclaimed by Mayor George Frederick, who issued a proclamation in co-operation with the churches.

New York—The Max Lief family knew it was hot but they didn't think it should be as hot as all that. After sweltering in their Rockaway Beach home for several hours they discovered one of the children had turned on the oil burner.

Ossining, N. Y.—A group of taxpayers was billed $141.91 for snow shoveling. The charges were assessed by the village trustees against property owners who failed to remove the snow from in front of their buildings last winter.

Newark, N. J.—Transport Pilot Bill Campbell said the temperature rose from 69 degrees to 92 when he dropped down from a 9,000-foot level for a landing at Newark Airport. It was hottest at 2,000 feet, he said—102 degrees.

Showers Are Predicted in Some Areas, But Warmth Will Stay.

Forest Fires Add To Ravages of Sun

All-Time High Reached in Both Baltimore and Richmond.

Blistering the Nation from the Atlantic Seaboard through the Middle West, the heat wave yesterday sent temperatures to new high marks and brought its death toll for the week to 420.

The East and the Mississippi Valley and most of the Great Plains were baked by a merciless sun.

Possibility of light, scattered showers by tomorrow in the parched and drought-ridden areas of the Central States was seen by forecasters. If the prediction materializes, however, officials said, it will lower temperatures only slightly. Rain may fall in the Dakotas and parts of Minnesota and Nebraska.

Temperatures equalled or surpassed Thursday's marks, which had passed new records in many places, according to the Associated Press.

The torrid sun was not the only weather scourage yesterday. Thousands of acres or rich timberland were seared by forest fires, smoke and ashes. Some States suffered from violent and death-dealing electrical storms.

Aberdeen, S. Dak., Hottest.

Aberdeen, S. Dak., again was the hottest spot in the United States, with an official high mark of 113.4, half a degree higher than its scorching 113 of yesterday.

Next came Jamestown, N. Dak., in the heart of the drought-stricken, scorched wheat country, with 113. Bowling Green, Ohio, and Bedford, Ind., had 110 each, Cumberland, Md., 108, and Baltimore an all-time high of 106.

Temperatures 100 or above were the standard half way across the Nation.

The heat in Maryland yesterday was greater than ever before in history. The thermometer in Baltimore registered 1.8 degrees higher than ever before recorded. In Cumberland the mercury leaped upward at the rate of 2 degrees an hour to reach 109 degrees in mid-afternoon.

Conowingo Damages.

The chief State roads engineer, Nathan L. Smith, said he saw concrete roads "blowing up" near Conowingo. Crews were ordered out to make repairs as quickly as possible.

At Cumberland, Mayor Thomas W. Koon ordered all out-of-doors workers employed by the city to quit work at noon.

A temperature of 106 degrees was reported at Frederick at 1:30 p. m. At Hagerstown, a shower sent the mercury down temporarily after it had registered 105.5 at 2:30 p. m.

Robert Lee Arnold, about 28, said to be proprietor of a lunchroom in Seat Pleasant, Md., was reported drowned in Chesapeake Bay late last night. Arnold had been fishing with John Russell, owner of a garage at Seat Pleasant. He was washed from the boat when a storm broke over the bay during the late afternoon.

High winds and a deluge of hail accompanied a storm of cloudburst proportions that swept across lower Prince Georges County late yesterday. Crop damage was reported in several places.

Peculiarly enough, the storm seemed confined to certain areas. At North Keys, Md., residents declared it was nothing short of a "cloudburst." In and around Naylor, Md., farmers said tobacco crops had been damaged. The storm was preceded by a roar of wind and hail that caused many persons to believe a "twister" had gone through the vicinity.

New High at Richmond.

The sun blasted a new July high in Richmond, where the temperature of 104 degrees smashed the previous mark of 103, established in July, 1930.

Roanoke reported the highest reading in the Old Dominion, with the mercury soaring to 105 degrees. Lynchburg sweltered with the thermometer at 104, and Danville reported 103.

At Tazewell, in the Virginia hills, a heat prostration was reported when the mercury reached 104.

In New York City the temperature reached 100 degrees, the hottest July 10 on record. Thursday'

Kansan Attacks New Deal Claim Of Farm Gains

Administration Assailed by Rep. Hope as Capper Backs Bounties.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 10.—Two participants in the significant Landon-Lowden conference contributed views to the discussions of Republican farm plans today, one emphasizing anew that bounties would be paid farmers and the other questioning the New Deal's program.

Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, who sat at the luncheon table while Gov. Alf M. Landon and Frank O. Lowden talked farm problems yesterday, said the Illinois leader had "faced squarely a fact that some folks are trying to dodge for fear it will arouse antagonism in certain quarters."

"The bounties to farmers who cooperat ein a national soil conservation program will have to be continued," Capper quoted Lowden as saying.

The Presidential nominee affirmed this statement at the press conference when it was made by Lowden.

Representative Clifford R. Hope, of Kansas, who also heard the Landon-Lowden conversations, issued a statement at the Governor's office in which he said President Roosevelt had made the "astounding inference" that a 10 per cent increase in wheat and corn acreage had been part of the Administration's farm plans "all along."

"Until the President spoke," Hope said, "no intimation had come out

Army Balloon Crashes, Burns; 2 Dead, 2 Hurt

Bag Falls in Oklahoma Practice Trip; Cause Undetermined.

By the Associated Press.

Anadarko, Okla., July 10.—Two Army sergeants were burned to death and another injured when an Army balloon from Fort Sill crashed into a blackjack thicket near Cogar, Okla., and burst into flames late today.

Master Sergt. Ralph J. Rumple, 46, Milwaukee, Wis., was dead before farmers reached the blazing bag. Sergt. Douglass M. Tucker, 33, Fort Sill, died of burns at a hospital.

Sergt. Joseph Murray, 31, was treated for shoulder and leg burns.

Capt. F. D. Lynch escaped with minor injuries.

Private Harold Dawson, of Fort Sill, one of four soldiers following the spherical balloon in a truck, said the bag had been losing altitude and suddenly crashed into a blackjack thicket, one mile northwest of Cogar.

Dawson said they had been having difficulty keeping the bag aloft, and had been forced to throw out ballast one-half mile north of Anadarko.

He did not know the cause of the crash.

The craft was on a practice flight.

Elmer Church and his father, A. C. Church, were the first to reach the crash scene.

"I saw the balloon come over my house," said Elmer. "It dipped a

Forgotten Bill Flown to South, Signed by Bankhead, Garner

Southward through the heated night roared a huge Army transport plane, heavily laden with men, some in uniform, some in mufti—reportedly 14 of them on a mission that so evidently demanded speed—more speed lest they be too late.

Out of the Nation's Capital they had sped, and into the darkness they drove through long hours. Hundreds of miles of Dixie passed below them, and then their first goal—Birmingham.

On the landing field there policemen awaited them, standing beside an automobile ready for a dash over the countryside.

The car sped to Jasper, Ala., home of Speaker of the House William Bankhead. The Speaker was aroused, the party's mission explained, and hastily he signed his name on a document.

Back to the plane, refueled in the interim, the party drove. And off into the night the huge machine resumed its race. Westward this time it sped—westward until vast Texas was below it. Over the plains it continued, then swooped down at Uvalde, home city of John Nance Garner, Vice President of the United States and, as such, president of the Senate.

The procedure at Jasper was repeated. The Vice President added his name to the document signed by the Speaker, and the flying messengers, the first half of their task accomplished, boarded their plane and started the dash back to Washington.

The document was a bill passed in the dying days of the Congressional session, but its signing was overlooked in the adjournment rush.

The measure sets up regulations for certifying witnesses before Congressional bodies and stipulates procedure for contempt citations in event witnesses fail to appear. Such cases as that of Dr. Francis Townsend and his followers who failed to give evidence sought by the Congressional committee investigating old-age pension organizations presumably would be covered by its provisions.

12 High Offices In Government Still Unfilled

President Expected to Let Several Stay Vacant on Return From Trip.

By the Associated Press.

More than a dozen high Government posts were left unfilled yesterday when President Roosevelt announced he would make no appointments to major vacancies until his return to the Capital from his vacation.

The President is not expected to fill several of the important vacant chairs in his official family even when he does return to Washington.

Mr. Roosevelt added one more to the extensive list of vacancies yesterday when he accepted the resignation of Ralph W. Morrison, of Texas, as a member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System.

Differences of Opinion.

Morrison, a friend of Vice President Garner, submitted his resignation several weeks ago, presumably because of differences of opinion on fiscal questions with Mariner S. Eccles, chairman of the board.

One of the most important jobs to be filled is that of Under Secretary of State.

William Phillips, the present Under Secretary, is to be named Ambassador to Italy, succeeding Breckinridge Long, when Phillips returns from the sailing vacation he is now on with his three sons.

The Italian government is known to be pleased at the selection of an Ambassador of Phillips' rank and ability, formal announcement of his appointment is understood to have been held up pending a determination by the President as to his successor in the State Department.

Three Are Mentioned.

Three outstanding diplomats have been mentioned in discussion of those who might be picked to succeed Phillips: Sumner Welles, former Ambassador to Cuba and now Assistant Secretary; R. Walton Moore, former Virginia Congressman and now Assistant Secretary, and William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to the Soviet Union.

Diplomatic circles buzzed yesterday with reports that Bullitt, now in this country, would resign his Moscow post soon.

Bullitt has declined comment on the reports.

Other major positions that are vacant include:

Undersecretary of the Treasury.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy, vacant since the death of Col. Henry L. Roosevelt.

Minister to Persia.

Minister to Persia and Afghanistan, vacant since the resignation of William H. Hornibrook, Utah newspaper publisher.

Comptroller General, made vacant by the expiration of Joseph R. McCarl's 15-year appointment.

Director of the Budget, filled by Daniel W. Bell as acting director since the resignation of Lewis Douglas.

Second Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Secretary to the President, a post unfilled since the death of the President's close friend and political adviser, Col. Louis McHenry Howe.

Commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation.

Frank Murphy resigned as high commissioner to the Philippines to run for Governor of Michigan, but Mr. Roosevelt is holding naming of a successor in "abeyance." Postmaster General Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is on a leave of absence to conduct the Democratic campaign.

addition to Secretary Ickes, were Marvin H. McIntyre, Stephen T. Early and Miss M. A. LeHand, his secretaries, and his military and naval aides.

Finishing Touches on Bridge.

New York, July 10 (AP).—High above the East River, upwards of 2,000 men worked frantically in the heat tonight to dress up the Triborough Bridge for its formal dedication tomorrow by President Roosevelt and the public opening of 14 miles of connecting highways.

In the lingering twilight painters sprayed aluminum paint on steel girders and themselves; their faces, hair and clothes were caked deep with the silver mixture. If their aim was poor, it was only because they hurried to complete on time a monumental job—the largest completed PWA project in the East.

Into this second most expensive bridge in the United States—its total cost has been set at $64,000,000—the Government poured $44,200,000, an amount its sponsors, the Triborough Bridge Authority, believe will soon be returned as the traveling public drops its quarters into turnstile cash boxes.

Serving as a connecting link between three of New York's largest boroughs—Queens, Bronx and Manhattan—the structure is expected to save as much as an hour in running time between the Bronx and Queens alone for the thousands of vehicles that will use it daily.

The project consists of the bridge with its viaduct and the approaches which take in four overwater crossings—Hell Gate, Little Hell Gate, Bronx Kills and Harlem River crossing; and the connections which consist of 14 miles of highways and roadways in the three connected boroughs.

At noon tomorrow President Roosevelt, Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, Gov. Lehman and other officials will assist in its opening. After the ceremony, the President will make an inspection trip, emerging finally in the Bronx to board his private railroad car and travel to his Hyde Park home.

WPA announced that finishing touches would be completed at midnight.

John Gilbert's Estate Assessed at $407,453

Los Angeles, July 10 (AP).—The value of the estate of the late John Gilbert, once "the great lover" of the screen, was placed at $407,453 in an official appraisal filed in probate court today.

Gilbert died January 9 of this year. His will provided that Virginia Bruce, the actor's fourth wife, should receive the bulk of the estate.

Kipling's 'The Gods of Copybook Headings' Provides Satire on New Dealers.

By Franklyn Waltman

BEATEN down by the sweltering heat of Washington's most torrid day in six years, I laid aside a profound study of the defects of the capital gains and losses tax. I wanted no more of it in this heat—and I knew you would want none of it. Instead I picked up Rudyard Kipling in the hope that poetry would refresh and cool our feverish brow.

WALTMAN.

And there, lo and behold, in "The Gods of the Copybook Headings" was a satire on the New Deal as sharp and severe as though the English bard had the Roosevelt Administration in mind when he wrote this piece back in 1919.

Would not this apply to President Roosevelt's implied claim of a monopoly on all virtue by the New Deal?

"We were living in trees when they met us.
They showed us each in turn.
"That Water would certainly wet us,
As Fire would certainly burn:
"But we found them lacking in Uplift,
Vision and Breadth of Mind,
"So we left them to teach the Gorillas While we followed the March of Mankind."

* * * *

Is there in this stanza a warning to those who would yield to a constitutional amendment expanding Federal authority over local industry?

"When the Cambrian measures were forming,
They promised perpetual peach.
"They swore, if we gave them our weapons,
That the wars of the tribes would cease.
"And when we disarmed,
They sold us and delivered us bound to our foe.
"And the Gods of the Copybook Heading said:
'Stick to the devil—you know.'"

And of the "good neighbor" policy, Kipling warns us and points a moral:

"On the first Feminian Sandstones we were promised the Fuller Life
"(Which started by loving our neighbor and ended by loving his wife)
'Till our women had no more children and the men lost reason and faith,
"And the Gods of the Copybook Headings said: 'The Wages of Sin is Death'"

But best of all is this:

"In the Carboniferous Epoch we were promised abundance for all,
"By robbing selected Peter to pay for collective Paul;
"But, though we had plenty of money, there was nothing our money could buy.
"And the Gods of the Copybook Headings said: "If you don't work you die'"

Let those beware who would dismiss Gov. Alf M. Landon as one who "knows all the copybook maxims," for as Kipling concludes:

"When all men are paid for existing and no man must pay for his sins,
"As surely as Water will wet us, as surely as Fire will burn,
"The Gods of the Copybook Headings with terror and slaughter return!"

Having started in this fashion, I might as well go on. In the heat of the next few days do not be surprised if there is an outburst of stories suggesting the possibility that international currency stabilization is just around the corner. It always happens when Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, comes to this country.

London cables report that Mr. Norman has sailed for New York and quotes him as saying on his departure that "I am going to Maine, but I cannot tell the nature of my visit." So? Who else is going to Maine? Why none other than President Roosevelt next Tuesday. But the President is going there to board a schooner for a sail up to Campobello. O yeah? we can hear a cynical financial writer saying, didn't Montagu Norman once come here disguised as "Prof. Skinner"? And where is Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau? Up at Cape Cod—but a few hours from Maine. Looks like the makings of a good story, all right!

Perhaps it is ironical that the newspaper which William Jennings Bryan once edited should for the first time in 50 years break away from its Democratic moorings and severely lambaste that President who has more nearly carried out the Bryan ideology than any other man. The new owners of the Omaha (Nebr.) World-Herald regard Mr. Roosevelt as another Hitler.

But times change and undoubtedly Bryan, "the Great Commoner" and foe of intrenched wealth, would turn over in his grave if he knew that his daughter was about to marry one of the Danish King's guardsmen and that his granddaughter is married to a Wall street banker.

* * * *

And lest anyone should have thought we were too severe in condemning the inanity of the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia, let them listen to Oswald Garrison Villard, former editor of the left-wing weekly, the Nation, writing about that conclave in its current issue.

"For the sake of the record," said Mr. Villard, "be it written that this was the dreariest, dullest, stupidist, loudest, most inane, most vulgar, most blatant, most idiotic, most depressing, most childish, most needless, most incredible, and generally most disgusting of political gatherings, bar none. If I had a few more adjectives I should apply them too, and also would borrow Henry Mencken's favorite word 'obscene' if he had not worked it to death."

of labor organization in the United States; that many of the international unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. are incompetent to protect the interests of those whom they represent; that they are to pass out of the picture in the near future, and the C. I. O. program become the dominant force.

Increase Forecast.

"It is my opinion that had it not been for the influence of the C. I. O. and the activity of some of its leaders before it was brought into existence, the membership of some of the international unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. would have greatly increased, in some instances trebled and quadrupled."

Frey further charged that the activities of the C. I. O. had received the active support of the Communist Party in the steel districts.

"While there is no evidence that the C. I. O. has any working agreement with the Communist Party," Frey told the council, "there is a mass of authentic evidence indicating that the Communist Party has ceased all its other activities for the time being and is doing all within its power to assist the C. I. O. This policy of the Communist Party constitutes an additional menace to the trade union movement which has been built up under the guidance of the American Federation of Labor."

Green's Status Discussed.

The question of the status of Green himself should the United Mine Workers be suspended for their activity in connection with the C. I. O. has brought up again yesminers' union. He is a member and was for years secretary of the miner's union. He is a member and president of the A. F. of L. by virtue of his membership in the mine union. When asked about his status he said he "absolutely refused" to discuss it.

Green also hit out in indignant language at a Communist leader, William Z. Foster. The latter had been quoted in a labor publication as saying that Green's statement that the A. F. of L. contributed several hundred thousand dollars to the 1919 steel strike was a "brazen falsehood."

Green replied that in 1919 the federation had collected $418,161, which was turned over to Foster's organization which had charge of the steel strike. He added that the records show that Foster spent this money in connection with the strike.

"Foster dare not, nor cannot, challenge these facts nor deny them," he said.

Security League Formed.

Pittsburgh, July 10 (AP).—Weirton, W. Va., employes of the Weirton Steel Co. said today they had organized an Employes' Security League to "oppose any and all attempts to disturb the satisfactory conditions under which we are working."

Jack Larkin, president of the company's employe representatives, said:

"The word security means just what it says. We don't propose to lose time and money just because John Lewis wants to get half a million workers under his thumb. We feel capable of taking care of our own affairs without help from coal miners and ladies' garment workers."

Omaha Paper Bryan Edited Shifts to Landon

Democratic for 50 Years, World-Herald Turns Against New Deal.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Omaha, Nebr., July 10.—Democratic in policy for half a century, and once edited by William Jennings Bryan, "the Great Commoner," the Omaha World-Herald is turning to support of Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican nominee for the Presidency.

The newspaper, described as "a leading Democratic organ in the upper Missouri Valley for 50 years," has made clear the change in its feelings and support in a number of editorials bitterly criticizing New Deal policies, and in a statement of policy just issued.

The statement, made public by Henry Dorly, publisher of the World-Herald, said:

"For about 50 years, under ownership of former Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, the World-Herald was 'Democratic' in policies.

Attack Broken Promises.

"On Mr. Hitchcock's death the World-Herald was changed to an independent newspaper, trying to explain fairly to our readers the facts as we saw them without partisan prejudice.

"We have stated editorially quite frankly that we do not like many actions of the 'New Deal' Administration, including broken promises, the unbalanced budget, profligate waste and expenditures, and unconstitutional laws.

"We have also protested the projected regimentation of the Nation under a central authority at Washington.

"A careful reading of our recent editorials will not leave much doubt as to our position."

Likened to Hitler.

An editorial indicative of the paper's new views was published following President Roosevelt's speech of acceptance at the Democratic convention in Philadelphia last month.

In another recent editorial the paper stated that "the choice is not between a Republican Administration and a Democratic Administration. It is a choice between two new parties, one headed by Gov. Landon, the other by President Roosevelt."

Farm Problem

of Washington that the Administration had any other idea in mind than a reduction in these crops. Now that the drought is threatening a scaracity of food and feed crops and it appears that the reduction program was a mistake * * * the Administration is attempting to get out in front and lead the parade the other way."

Hope, who is ranking Republican on the House Agriculture Committee, said that a month ago the farmer who reduced his acreage "was doing the right thing according to the Administration program," but that today "the ones who rejected the program are extolled by the President."

Landon Is Silent.

Beyond saying that he enjoyed the conference very much, Landon had no comment today on the farm views outlined by Lowden. His July 23 acceptance speech is expected to deal with the farm problem particularly.

The Governor spent the day in his office, receiving a few visitors.

Col. Frank Knox, of Illinois, his running mate, was expected for a conference Wednesday. On the calling list for tomorrow were James G. Rogers, Yale law professor and former Assistant Secretary of State, and Miss Natalie Couch, director of women's activities in the Eastern campaign division.

Landon said he might visit outside of Topeka over the week-end, but had no definite plans.

In discussing the Landon-Lowden conference in an address prepared for radio delivery, Capper emphasized that, as "in the permanent part of the present act," the Republican farm program calls for "a large measure of State and local control."

States Would Direct Plan.

The States, he said, would administer the soil conservation plan with funds supplied by the Federal Government.

"Gov. Lowden, like myself, like Gov. Landon," Capper said, "does not believe in opposing a worthwhile program just because it has been put into effect by a different political party than that to which we belong * * *.

"The present national Administration did a great wrong in depriving the States and the farmers themselves of any control of the present farm program."

The Senator quoted Lowden as holding the belief that Landon "will be the next President of the United States."

A Family Divided in Politics

Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Stout Lillard for whom politics is a family affair, because the husband is related to President Roosevelt and the wife to Gov. Landon.

Husband Related to Roosevelt, Wife to Landon: Lillards Argue

Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Stout Lillard, of 213 A street southeast, who both work in the copyright division of the Library of Congress, agree on most things.

But they have reached the limit.

After all, what can you expect, when a husband, like Lillard, is related to the Democratic President of the United States, and his wife is kin to the Republican nominee for the Presidency?

To be specific, Lillard, who is a genealogist on the side, has discovered that he and President Roosevelt have ancestors in common—John Bill and Dorothy Tuthill, of colonial Boston. And Mrs. Lillard's great-grandmother, Elizabeth Landon, of Ohio, was a sister of the great-grandfather of Gov. Alf M. Landon.

The Lillards can't overlook the bonds of heritage as the Roosevelt-Landon Campaign gathers momentum, and admitted yesterday the coming election is a matter of controversy in their home.

"Of course, I don't mean to say Mr. Roosevelt isn't a fine man," said Mrs. Lillard. "I think he means everything he says, and is trying to do a lot of good."

"Gov. Landon is a fine man, too," added Mr. Lillard, in an interview that was not conducted in the Lillard home.

That both Presidential candidates are "fine men," they granted, but—Mr. and Mrs. Lillard are apparently going a long way to show which one each considers the finer. They are both going to their home towns to vote this fall.

And this brings us to another coincidence that distinguishes the Lillard home. Lillard comes from Danville, Ky.; Mrs. Lillard hails from Danville, Ill.

The Lillards will both be in different Danvilles on election day.

"Of course, I don't think it would be right for either of us to say just who we will vote for," said Mrs. Lillard.

"And I don't want you to think we take this whole matter too seriously," added Lillard. "After all, you see, no matter who wins the election, we will have relatives in the White House."

In all fairness it must be pointed out that Mr. and Mrs. Lillard, both of whom are young people, don't spend all their spare time aggravating political animosity. Lillard is a writer. One book, "Lillard: A Family of Colonial Virginia" is already published. Another, "A Register of Queen Anne Parish" (Prince Georges County, Md.) is scheduled to appear next fall. It is dedicated to President Roosevelt.

Mrs. Lillard has written a book of poems, "From My Treasure Chest." She is a lecturer on heraldry and coats of arms, having carried on extensive research on the subject.

The Lillards met as co-workers in the copyright division. They were married February 14, 1928. In eight years they've never disagreed on anything—that is, up to now.

Huron, S. Dak., July 10 (AP).—B. R. Laskowski, Federal meteorologist, today came forth with the "why" of the current protracted torrid wave.

Because a low pressure area continues to hang over Montana, North Dakota and Canada instead of following its customary Eastern movement, South Dakota remains in the grip of abnormally high temperatures, Laskowski said.

Ordinarily, he said, these low-pressure areas shift eastward after a day or two. No movement has been noted now for about a week, and until this stagnant condition of the air is relieved, South Dakotans may look for no definite break in the heat, he said.

Landon Family Selects Attire For Ceremony

Holds Impromptu Fashion Show in Preparation for Notification.

By the Associated Press.

Estes Park, Colo., July 10.—The Landons held an impromptu fashion show at their vacation ranch here today in preparation for the ceremonies July 23, at which Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, will learn officially he is the Republican Presidential nominee.

The whole family, from Mrs. Landon to 2-year-old Jack, displayed the results of their "notification shopping." The Governor's two daughters, Peggy Anne, 19, and Nancy Jo, 4, and Mrs. Mildred Creighton, Mrs. Landon's secretary, also took part.

An appreciative audience for this private showing of the "latest styles for a Presidential candidate's family" included John M. Landon, the Governor's father; Mrs. S. E. Cobb, Mrs. Landon's mother, and Mrs. Lucy McCue, the children's nurse.

Gown of Chiffon.

Mrs. Landon has chosen a dinner length, high-neck redingote gown of chiffon with a salmon pink rose design on a white background over heavy white crepe. She decided on a white linen straw hat with wide brim and shallow crown, trimmed with a flat "angel wing" bow. The hat dipped slightly over her right eye.

She selected white gloves and a pair of white satin and grosgrain modified T-strap sandals with moderate heels—"good standing heels, which are very essential," she observed.

The family paraded before the Governor's father, who sat reading a newspaper before a log fire.

"Well, how do I look?" asked Mrs. Landon.

About 5 feet 4 inches tall, and slim, the youthful Mrs. Landon walked up and down in front of the elderly man.

"Hmm, a new dress?" commented Mr. Landon, pursing his lips.

Landon Economy.

"The Landon economy," Mrs. Landon said, laughing. "But after all, your son isn't nominated for President every day."

Her 78-year-old father-in-law nodded, his eyes twinkling.

"It's very pretty—and so are you."

Peggy Ane was the next "to show grandpa," she chose a red, blue and yellow field flower print on a light green background of marquisette, a summer formal.

It has puff sleeves, a modified V-neck and full skirt which just misses the floor. Brunette Peggy Anne plans to wear with it a natural colored leghorn hat, wide-brimmed and trimmed with field flowers, and green slippers.

Mrs. Creighton, who will accompany the nominee's wife to Topeka, selected a smartly tailored white crepe sports dress trimmed with crystal buttons.

Norman Off for U. S.

Southampton, England, July 10 (AP).—Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, left today for New York aboard the S. S. Bremen. Gov. Norman, always mysterious about his travels, declared "I am going to Maine and will be away only a few weeks, but I cannot tell the nature of my visit."

2 Die in Boat Blast; 3 Seriously Hurt

Whitestone, N. Y., July 10 (AP).—Two baby girls were killed and three women were seriously injured by a gas tank explosion which wrecked the yacht Commodore in Long Island Sound late today.

Patricia Irene Brown, 18 months old, was burned to death as flames spread through the 50-foot cabin cruiser 5 feet off a dock.

Nine-month-old Jennie Newberry was drowned as the explosion catapulated the infant and two of the women into the water, their clothing afire.

The injured women were Mrs. Doris Newberry, 18-year-old mother of the drowned child, who suffered second-degree burns; Mrs. Charles Pettit, 48, Mrs. Newberry's mother, who suffered a fractured leg, and Mrs. Irene Brown, mother of Patricia Irene Brown, who had a fractured back.

The other occupants of the craft were Ernest Smith, captain and engineer, and Charles Pettit, Mrs. Pettit's husband, whose injuries were minor.

The yacht burned to the water's edge and sank.

Boston Baseball Magnate, Wife Adopt Baby Girl

Yawkey, Multimillionaire, Signs Legal Papers at Chicago Home.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 10.—Tom Yawkey, multimillionaire owner of the Boston Red Sox, who has spent some $3,500,000 for baseball players, made a sentimental investment today.

When the legal proceedings were over, all the documents signed, he and Mrs. Yawkey, the former Elsie Sparrow, of Birmingham, Ala., were the foster parents of a 9-week-old girl.

They adopted the baby at The Cradle, in suburban Evanston, where many other affluent Americans, including former Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York, and Al Jolson have come for foster children.

The newest of Yawkey's "million-dollar babies"—and the first not destined for a baseball career—will be named Julia Austin Yawkey.

The "Julia," Mrs. Yawkey explained, was for Mrs. O'Neill Ryan, jr., of Chicago, a friend; the "Austin" was for Austin King, another friend, of Danville, Ill.

The 33-year-old baseball magnate and his wife arrived here this morning, registered at a North Shore hotel and proceeded at once with the formalities of adoption. Three days must elapse before the adoption becomes final, but the Yawkeys already have possession of their daughter.

Mrs. Yawkey, wearing a marine blue linen suit and chamois colored gloves, said there was no secret about the adoption, although only her mother and sister knew of it before hand. She said she selected the little girl on a visit to the Cradle some time ago.

"She's awfully tiny yet—just 9 or 10 pounds of heaven—but she is wonderful. I'm going to spend most of my time with her. A nursery is being prepared in our penthouse in New York."

Mrs. Yawkey engaged a nurse from the Cradle to accompany her East and care for the child. She said her departure would be delayed for several days in hope of cooler weather. In the meantime, the baby will remain at the Cradle.

13 Murderers Are Executed In Nine States

Hangings, Firing Squad, Gas, Electrocution Used in 'Last Miles.'

By the United Press.

Thirteen convicted murderers were executed yesterday in nine States. Every form of execution practiced in this country—electrocution, hanging, poison gas and the firing squad—were employed at one or another of the State prisons where doomed men walked their "last mile."

Most dramatic was the electrocution at Raleigh, N. C., of Henry Grier, a colored man, convicted of murdering his one-time mistress. When the time for the execution arrived Grier's keepers allowed him to tell fellow prisoners in death row goodbye. He broke loose and leaped from an inside corridor to the concrete floor of the basement, 30 feet below, in an attempt to beat the chair by suicide. All he gained was two hours respite and a lot of pain. His broken bones were held together by plaster casts and his bruised and bleeding body was carried to the chair by five prisoners, where he was electrocuted.

Most bizarre was the death of Delbert Green, who sat strapped in a chair with a paper heart pinned on his breast and was shot by five hidden riflemen in the yard of the Utah State Prison at Salt Lake City. He was convicted of killing his wife, mother-in-law and an uncle six years ago "because they bothered" him. One of the riflemen fired a blank, but which one, no one but the sheriff knew. Green had the alternative of hanging or death before a firing squad.

Frank Rascon, a Mexican cowboy, was gassed at the Arizona State Prison at Florence for the death of another cowboy. He marched into the gas chamber in shorts, smoking a cigar and insisting to the last that he was dying for a crime committed by his father.

Roosevelt Moon, colored, was hanged at Clarksdale, Miss., for killing a man while robbing a country store. It was just an ordinary hanging.

Texas had a triple electrocution, a white man and two colored men. Grady Warren, the white man, went first. Mack and Oscar Brown, brothers, followed him, each arguing to the last that it was the other who committed the murder for which they died.

John Collins, convicted of killing a man while robbing a saloon, almost hurried as he walked to the electric chair at Sing Sing. Nothing lifted his execution from the smooth routine developed by much-practiced Executioner Robert Elliott.

Irwin Bottey, 35, who killed his wife and called it a "birthday present" for her, was hanged in San Quentin prison in California.

A. B. Smiley, a colored murderer, did not want to die "with his boots on" in Alabama State prison at Montgomery. As he was being taken to the chair he kicked off one of his shoes. The warden made him put it back on. "Oh, well," said Smiley with resignation, and died.

Three colored men were hanged within an hour in the glass inclosed dome of the Coushatta, La., courthouse. It was the first hanging there in 12 years and 300 persons gathered in the square. But they couldn't see the gibbet take the lives of James Morrison, 24, his brother Alec Morrison, 32, and Richard Valentine, 27, because the glass dome was stained. They killed a woman and child in a robbery.

Tweedsmuir in Hospital

Montreal, July 10 (AP).—Lord Tweedsmuir, the governor general of Canada, was reported admitted to the Royal Victoria Hospital today. He was said to be suffering recurrence of a former gastric complaint.

Lieut. Col. Ord Transferred To Fort Benning Command

Fort Washington Post to Be Taken Over by Lieut. Col. Cook.

Lieut. Col. James Garesche Ord, descendant of one of the country's most famous military families, is to be relieved as commanding officer of Fort Washington, Md., on September 1 and assigned to the infantry board at Fort Benning, Ga., the War Department announced yesterday.

He will be succeeded by Lieut. Col. Gilbert R. Cook, now at Fort Meade, but soon to be transferred to Fort Washington.

Every since the War of 1812, each generation of the Ord family has contributed at least one officer to the Army—a brigadier general in the Civil War, a major in the Spanish-American War, two majors and a colonel in the World War.

The first Ord to take up a rifle for his country was Col. Ord's great-grandfather, James Ord, a lieutenant in the infantry during the War of 1812. A native of Maryland, James Ord was a graduate of Georgetown University. He first joined the Navy, but in 1813 was transferred to the Infantry.

The war inspired James Ord to enlist in his country's service, but his son, Edward Otho Cresap Ord, was determined on a military career from his youth. Born at Cumberland, Md., in 1818, he was appointed to the Military Academy from the District of Columbia, graduating in the class of 1839. He fought in the Seminole Indian, Mexican and Civil Wars, being wounded in the later two wars.

He received his first wound at the battle of Hatchie, Miss., and the second at the battle of Fort Harrisson, Va., on each occasion being rewarded with a promotion. In 1865 he became commander of the Union forces in the Department of Virginia and North Carolina, leading the army of James to numerous victories in the closing months of the war. He was at Appomattox Courthouse when Lee surrendered.

After the war he commanded the Departments of Arkansas, California, Texas and Platte, retiring in 1880, to accept a position as engineer of construction on the Mexican railways.

railways. He died in Havana, Cuba, in 1883.

None of Gen. Ord's three sons had intentions of following a military career. But when the Spanish-American War broke out, all three enlisted. James E., died of exposure in camp; Garesche was killed in action in Cuba, but Edward Otho Cresap came through the campaign as a major.

Like his distinguished grandfather, James Garesche Ord was determined on a military career. He entered West Point in 1905, receiving his commission as a second lieutenant in 1909. During the war he served as a major of infantry with the National Army and later with the Army of the Coblenz. Also in France at the time was his brother, Henry J., also a major in the National Army; while a second brother, Edward Otho Cresap 3d, was attached to Army headquarters at San Francisco.

After the war Col. Ord reverted to the rank of major in the Regular Army. In 1924 he was an honor graduate of the Command and General Staff School and in 1929 was graduated from the Army War College. He received his colonelcy in 1934 and has been commanding officer at Fort Washington for almost two years.

Incendiarism Hinted as Fires Destroy Forest

Wyoming Rangers Believe Jobless Men May Be Responsible.

By the Associated Press.

Sundance, Wyo., July 10.—Federal forestry officials investigated reports of incendiarism tonight as the forest fire which has raged near here since Sunday leaped man-made fire lines and crackled through new territory.

"I hate to say it, but it seems possible somebody may have set these fires," said Ted Cochran, forest ranger. "We are checking up on all strangers and ordered a bunch of 'floaters' out of town last night."

Officials said it was possible the Bear Lodge fire, which broke out Sunday, may have been started by unemployed men seeking jobs. Hastily recruited fighters have been paid 30 cents an hour.

Hurdled Clearing.

The fire, believed under control earlier today, hurdled a clearing laboriously cut by workers as the wind veered from southwest to east.

Flames 100 feet high jumped the fire lane.

All other blazes in Wyoming and Montana were declared by officials to be under control or entirely extinguished.

The Bear Lodge fire burned over an area estimated at 60 square miles. Two fires in the Black Hills in Weston County near Newcastle covered approximately 46 square miles. A fire in Lodge Grass Canon near Sheridan, was controlled after destroying 3,000 acres of timber.

Several Burned.

Ranchers in the Sundance area called the Bear Lodge blaze the worst in their recollection. Several of the fire fighters were burned, none seriously.

One crew of 40, led by Foreman Tom Traight, were caught between two burning areas when another crew, unaware the men were in the timber, started a backfire.

The men escaped by running through a flame-bordered lane between the two fires.

Sundance faced a water famine. Residents watched their last reserves dwindle faster than ever as water was piped to trucks near the fire zone.

Mayor Defies Extortionist Who Threatens to Burn Town

Prophetstown, Ill., Business Men Convinced Letter Asking $1,000 Is Serious in Intent, But They Refuse Payment.

By the Associated Press.

Prophetstown, Ill., July 10.—The grocer-Mayor of Prophetstown, George S. Brydia, issued a public defiance tonight to the extortionist who threatened to burn or blow up the village business section unless he was paid $1,000.

Although convinced that the threat was genuine, Mayor Brydia announced he would not make any effort to raise the money from business men as had been demanded.

The Mayor said he would follow the extortionist's directions—made in a letter received Wednesday—and post himself in the reference room of the Rockford Public Library, 75 miles away, at 7 p. m. (C. S. T.) tomorrow.

He said he would carry a shoe box tied with red cord as the letter instructed, but the $5 and $10 bills demanded would not be inside.

"I'm sorry the newspapers said anything about this," Brydia declared, "for we want to pinch this fellow. With all the publicity, I don't think he'll show up. "The mayor said he was "not in the least" worried about the situation, even though he believed "the whole town would be burned up" should a fire or explosion occur with everything so dry.

The police force of Prophetstown—population 1,500—was increased to three as an emergency protective measure, the mayor said, "and the men about town are keeping their eyes open."

The extortion letter, which was signed with a triangular symbol and the words "LaMorra Society" and had been mailed from nearby Wyoming, with a return address in Walnut, Iowa, was turned over to United States Justice Department agents in Chicago.

The letter caused more excitement than the intense heat in this little Whiteside County town, where the principal industry is a lawnmower plant. Mayor Brydia has served 16 years in office.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Sues for 'Legacy'

New York, July 10 (AP).—On a petition of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, mother of the child heiress to millions, 12-year-old Gloria Vanderbilt, Surrogate's Court today directed two co-executors of the estate of Mrs. Vanderbilt's late mother-in-law to show cause why they should not pay her a $100,000 legacy.

Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt, who waged a long and unsuccessful fight with one of the co-executors, Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney, over custody of little Gloria, petitioned the court to force the payment.

She set forth that she had made repeated efforts to obtain the money which, she said, was willed her by her mother-in-law, Alice G. Vanderbilt, in an instrument probated May 29, 1934. The estate is estimated at $10,000,000.

little, then went back into the air and headed straight for a high hill about a quarter of a mile from my house.

"The balloon bounced several times, striking the tops of trees, and the men in it threw out little bags every minute or two. Then it bounced into the air and headed for the top of the hill again. It just seemed to settle down slowly when it reached the top of the hill. Then all of a sudden it just seemed to explode. It sent up a great big puff of black smoke and fire shot 'way up into the air."

Hindenburg Off to U. S.

Frankfort-on-Main, Germany, July 10 (AP).—The Zeppelin Hindenburg left here at 8:55 p. m. (2:55 p. m. E. S. T.) tonight for Lakehurst, N. J., on another of its trans-Atlantic flights.

105 in City

day and tomorrow, the forecast says, will be "generally fair and continued warm." But the city's thousands upon thousands of sufferers were thankful for that respite.

Throughout the day, while a scorching sun beat down from cloudless skies, ambulances and police cars were kept busy answering prostration calls. An accurate count on the number of heat victims was not available.

As the mercury rose and citizens sweltered, Government departments without benefit of air conditioning apparatus dismissed employes. In the majority of instances, Federal and local buildings were closed by 1 p. m.

The peak was reached at 3:50 p. m. Official thermometer readings at the Weather Bureau recorded 105 degrees—a degree higher than Thursday's record. In their "no relief" announcement, forecasters indicated high temperatures would remain over the week-end.

To Reach 100 Today.

Shortly after 4 p. m. the mercury started to drop. Forecasters said today's temperatures would probably reach 100 by mid-afternoon.

Trouble crews of the Capital Transit Co. were dispatched at intervals throughout yesterday to release street cars stalled by heat-expanded pavements.

In many sections of the city asphalt paving buckled and cracked, pushing center street car rails together so passage of street cars was impossible. Workmen were forced to dig up the pavement to allow the rails to return to normal positions before traffic could be resumed.

A small stretch of sidewalk in the 500 block of Seventh street northwest, buckled and cracked from the strain of heat expansion.

Among first Government agencies to dismiss employes when the heat became severe was the Weather Bureau itself. All workers who could be spared were told to go home shortly before the lunch hour.

The General Accounting Office closed at 1 p. m., after three women workers collapsed at their desks.

While employes in air-cooled buildings continued to work until regular closing times, all employes in frame temporary buildings and District agencies stopped and went home. President Roosevelt took a hand in authorizing dismissal of workers in Army and Navy buildings.

Park police authorities reported 40,000 Washingtonians awoke in public parks yesterday after spending the night on improvised beds beneath the trees.

Swimming pool attendance broke all local records. More than 2,000 men, women and children were reported at the new Takoma Park Recreation Center.

In addition to many reported heat victims who left the institutions without being identified the following were treated at various hospitals for prostration:

Emergency Hospital—Miss Willie Atchison, 21, colored, 941 Rhode Island avenue northwest; Selas Brock, 63, colored, 757 Kenyon street northwest; Howard Camden, 26, 1424 Massachusetts avenue northwest; William Carter, 50, colored, 2445 M street northwest; William Carley, 53, 1114 Thirteenth street northwest; Louise Cauffman, 25, 1211 King street, Alexandria, Va.; Elmer Ridgeway, 26, 422 Third street northwest.

Georgetown Hospital — George Kidwell, 35, Lee Heights, Va.

Providence Hospital—Four persons were treated for heat exhaustion. Arthur De Koven, 35, an architect of 1436 R street northwest, was overcome while working in his office at 1146 eighteenth street northwest. Henry Cobb, colored, 34, of 2657 Sheridan road southeast, who collapsed while loading a truck, was also admitted to the hospital. Two others were treated and sent home.

Casualty Hospital—Twelve persons, a record number for the summer, were treated. Two of the most serious cases were William Brooks, of 1430 G street northeast, and Dewey Barnett, of 1425 C street southeast.

Gallinger Hospital—One victim, a woman PWA worker, who did not leave her name, was treated.

More than a dozen persons had been treated for heat exhaustion at Freedmen's Hospital by midnight.

Olive Thompson, 28, of Alexandria, was seriously injured yesterday in an accident attributed to the heat. While Thompson was mixing asphalt at Twenty-ninth street and the waterfront, the substance exploded. He was burned about the eyes and forehead and cut on the face. At Emergency Hospital his condition was said to be undetermined.

U. S. Will Issue Stamps Honoring Susan Anthony

Postmaster General Farley announced yesterday a stamp honoring Susan B. Anthony, pioneer leader of the woman suffrage movement, would be issued on August 28.

Farley said the stamp would be issued "in recognition of women's share in the development of this country and their social and economic responsibility in our national life."

Liver Useful In Balancing Summer Meals

Mushrooms in Cream, and Spanish Onion Recipes Offered.

SUMMER MEALS are apt to "go cold"—stressing cold salads, an occasional cold platter, vegetables and lots of cold drinks. Now is a good time to check up on the family menus and be sure that these cool meals are not lacking in the essential proteins and minerals that meats supply in such abundance.

The iron, phosphorus, the complete proteins, the vitamins are particularly concentrated in liver. And since liver is a completely lean meat, with no heat-producing fat, it makes a doubly desirable choice for balancing the summer diet. Plan to include a liver dish approximately once a week to insure a supply of these food essentials.

Calf's liver is, of course, the most delicate in flavor, but since the recent promotion of liver for America it is also higher in cost. Beef liver or pork liver yield the very same food elements at considerable saving in cost and may be just as tempting by proper methods of handling. A little lemon juice does wonders for beef liver. Just squeeze a little over the raw meat and allow to stand a half hour.

General rules for cooking liver include the removal of skin and large veins, followed by careful cooking to prevent toughening. Many people like to dip liver quickly into boiling water to make the meat firm and easier to handle, but this step is absolutely unimportant to the success of its cookery.

Dip the liver in seasoned flour and pan broil quickly in a little bacon fat or lard. It takes only a few minutes to cook it through.

Although onions and bacon are the common food flavors associated with liver, there are many other thoroughly delightful combinations which are especially attractive to summer appetites. Tomato and onion make an excellent combination flavor. Try cutting the liver in squares and placing it on long skewers with alternate pieces of bacon. Fry these brochettes just like you would any piece of liver and serve them on the skewers with grilled pineapple or grilled tomatoes.

These large, mild Spanish onions are particularly good when stuffed with mushrooms and chopped cooked liver and baked for a hot summer meal.

Mushrooms and Liver in Cream.

2 cups mushrooms (caps and stems)
2½ cups diced cooked liver
½ cup crumbs
5 tablespoons butter

Cream Sauce.

4 tablespoons butter
2½ tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Dash paprika
¾ cup evaporated milk
¾ cup water

Wash and peel caps and stems of mushrooms. Cut in pieces. There should be 2 cups of mushrooms. Melt the butter in a frying pan; use 3 tablespoons of it to butter the crumbs. Add the mushrooms to the remaining butter in frying pan and saute for three or four minutes; then add the liver. Make a cream sauce and pour over the liver and mushrooms. Turn into a buttered casserole; cover with the buttered crumbs and bake in a slow oven, 300 degrees F., for 30 minutes. Serves six portions.

Spanish Onions Stuffed With Liver.

6 Spanish onions
1½ pounds liver
1 cup grated bread crumbs
½ cup melted butter
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon parsley, chopped
1 cup boiling water
1 cup tomato sauce

Peel and parboil onions one-half hour. Cool; cut out a piece about two inches wide on the stem end, thus leaving a thin shell of onion. Trim, remove veins and chop liver. Add the crumbs, butter and seasoning. Fill onion cases. Give the mixture a dome shape above. Set the onions in a buttered casserole in the boiling water and bake in a 375° F. oven for about one-half hour, basting frequently with the liquid in the pan and then with two tablespoons of butter melted in a little water. When ready to serve pour the cup of tomato sauce around the onions. Serves seven to eight portions.

Cottage Dwellers Show Enthusiasm for Porch Dining

The most successful summer cottage has a porch which can be used as a dining space as well as a spot for comfortable lounging. This family of four finds that its small porch gives ample room for a table set in conventional style. If more floor space is desirable, the table may be pushed against the wall and the meal may be served buffet fashion.

Uninvited Cottage Guests Are Often a Problem

Hostess Must Keep Supply of Food on Hand for Such Emergency.

By Dorothea Duncan.

The charm of week-ends at the summer cottage is often turned into a nightmare for the hostess because of the inconsideration of uninvited and unexpected guests. There should be a law against such trespassers, but it would be a difficult one to enforce without offending friends and making it appear that the hostess of the cottage was inhospitable or unwilling to share her better fortune with her less prosperous friends.

The greatest problem that confronts the hostess of such a week-end retreat is that of having enough food on nand to supply her guests as well as her family. It would be considered the height of rudeness to solve the problem by merely tacking up a sign at the gate which read, "Intruders are welcome if they bring their own victuals," so the hostess must plan to keep in her refrigerator and on her pantry shelves a supply of quickly prepared foods for just this emergency.

Inexpensive, Palatable.

The average grocery store offers many ideas for hastily prepared meals, but the wise woman will take careful stock of the merchandise offered before she makes her decision so that the food that she purchases will be inexpensive as well as palatable. Few persons realize until after a meal for a large group of ravenous persons is served just how much money it will take from a carefully planned budget.

Canned soups will naturally head the list for they are easily prepared, inexpensive and especially desirable if the rest of the meal should consist of cold food. Canned milk, too, will provide for tempting hot or cold fruit or chocolate beverages. Crackers and cookies that will keep fresh should be a part of the stock on the cottage pantry shelf, especially crackers, lest the bread supply run out. The varieties that come in tins or heavily waxed paper wrapped boxes are desirable, so the contents will keep crisp and fresh.

Casserole Dishes.

Casserole dishes are so popular, so easy to prepare, and so very inexpensive that the ingredients for this type of main course should be kept on hand. Canned spaghetti, tuna fish, salmon, baked beans, stews, etc., with the addition of green pepper, pimiento, hard cooked eggs, onion or garlic, celery, etc., are filling and palatable foods that may be used in preparing an inexpensive and tempting casserole for a large crowd. The addition of a cream sauce will always stretch the amount if necessary.

Canned fruits are the most practical as well as the most inexpensive of desserts. Bottled salad dressings for a green salad to accompany the casserole dish should also be kept on hand. Paper cups and dishes will relieve the hostess of washing a large mess of dishes if the crowd to be served is numbering ten or twelve.

One young woman in Washington solved the Sunday entertaining problem very neatly last year and became quite famous for her cottage meals. After the first few week-ends spent at her summer cottage she realized that the quiet leisure that she had hoped for during the summer was going to be interrupted each Saturday afternoon or Sunday by casual callers from the heat-ridden city who camped on her front porch, made use of her beach, and stayed invited or uninvited to luncheon or dinner.

Two Meals a Day.

This young woman planned to have two meals a day over the week-end. One was breakfast which the family enjoyed in the late morning, the other dinner, which was served in the late afternoon. These dinners were classic meals for they were delicious, but easy to prepare and the cost almost nominal.

One of her prize meals consisted of iced tomato juice, which she purchased in large tins; lentils cooked with frankfurters and served steaming hot from an earthen casserole; rye bread and butter, a green salad or cole slaw served from a large wooden bowl, and stewed prunes. Coffee and iced cocoa made from evaporated milk were the two favorite beverages. If the crowd was unusually large and the ice supply running low, both beverages were served hot.

Little Preparation.

This meal took very little preparation. The lentils and prunes were soaked the night before and could be cooked with little watching the day they were to be served. Salad and beverages could be made in a jiffy. A bottle of homemade cocoa sirup kept in the refrigerator was also an aid in preparing the meal with greater speed.

This hostess kept this basic formula for all such week-end dinners. The tomato juice and green salad were always present. The hot dish varied. Sometimes she served lima or navy beans cooked with bacon or a bit of ham, sometimes a tuna fish, hard-cooked egg and celery mixture, or a salmon, green pepper and egg concoction, and so on. But she never let these meals disturb the figures of her weekly budget, nor take from her leisure over the week-end. She served the food from a table on the porch, buffet fashion, asking everyone to help himself. Paper plates and paper napkins were used which solved the dishwashing problem with the exception of one pan and silverware.

Polish Preparation.

Equal parts of kettle-boiled linseed oil, turpentine and vinegar make a splendid polish for furniture. With a soft cloth, rub on all the liquid the wood will absorb. With another cloth, wipe off the surplus. With a chamois or a soft woolen cloth, rub dry and polish. If it is really rubbed until dry, you will have a rich gleaming surface to which dust will not adhere easily.

Post Offers Five Cash Prizes For Winning Tapioca Recipes

TAPIOCA IS AN UNUSUAL food, for it not only provides the basis for refreshing all-year-around desserts, but it is frequently called upon to assume that elusive role which provides the thickening for chilled fruit and meat stock soups, the binding power that gives meat loaf the desirable consistency which means a well-shaped loaf and perfect slices, the thickening agent for luscious fruit or berry pies, etc.

Because tapioca is an important culinary ingredient in every household it has been chosen as the theme of The Post's recipe contest for next week. Cash awards will be offered for the five best recipes which suggest interesting uses for tapioca. The first prize will be $5, second, $3, and the three remaining prizes, $1 each.

What Attracts a Man?

EILEEN has always been enchanting! At every dance, men flock about her, fascinated.

"I'd like to put her through a quiz and find out how she does it!" declares her chum.

Let's try this charm quiz:

1. Should you show all the affection you feel for a man?
2. Or, can you win a man by indifference?
3. Do men really dislike intelligence in women?
4. Does a girl have to be pretty to attract men?
5. Should you write ardent love letters?

Here's what clever Eileen would answer:

1. No. A man becomes bored if you smother him with devotion. Control your emotions.
2. No. The man-hater pose attracts no one. Strike the note of easy, friendly gaiety.
3. They don't fall in love with women cleverer than they are themselves. They look for fun, companionship in girls.
4. Personality is more important than beauty. But be sure to look well-groomed.
5. Never. A light, teasing tone is much safer.

More tips like these—amusing, full of sense—you'll find in our 40-page booklet, "Success in Love and Marriage." Love at first sight; what to look for in a husband; love and the business girl—all helpfully discussed. A treasure for the perplexed.

Mrs. Duffy's Tempting Baking Powder Biscuits Popular.

By Pattie Ellicott.

THOSE FORTUNATE enough to have attended the pleasant at-homes and teas given by Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy, wife of the Senator from Wisconsin, have remarked upon the tempting baking powder biscuits stuffed with crisp bits of bacon which have been a feature of her tea table.

Mrs. Duffy realizes that guests, especially her husband's Congressional friends, enjoy such delicacies with the frills of the usual tea table.

The baking powder biscuits are made by Mrs. Duffy's cook after a favorite recipe of the Senatorial hostess. Any housewife can make them easily. Try them some night as a surprise for the family.

Baking Powder Biscuits.

3 cups flour
1½ cups sweet milk (about), or milk and water mixed
1 teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
1-3 cup shortening

Sift dry ingredients together in mixing bowl. Cut in shortening with a knife or rub in with tips of fingers. Add milk gradually, mixing in with a spoon or knife, using just sufficient to make dough soft enough to handle easily.

Pat ond roll out on biscuit board one-half inch thick, handling dough as little as possible all the way through. If crusty biscuits are preferred, roll dough thinner and do not let them touch in the pan. If soft, brown biscuits are preferred, roll dough thicker and crowd together in pan. Cut with small biscuit cutter.

Bake in hot oven from 10 to 18 minutes, dependent on size. The smaller the biscuits are, the quicker they should bake and the lighter they will be.

CONSTIPATION* MAY BE MORE SERIOUS THAN YOU THINK

It Causes Discomfort, May Even Lead to Disease

Constipation* is not a condition to be treated lightly. Continued neglect of regular habits of elimination tend to lower your resistance. Then there is the actual discomfort. For constipation* is one cause of headaches, poor appetite, listlessness.

Common constipation usually develops when you eat meals that lack sufficient "bulk." Your system fails to get needed internal exercise. Fortunately, today, you have a generous source of effective "bulk" in Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

Within the body, the "bulk" in ALL-BRAN absorbs moisture, and forms a soft mass, which gently cleanses the system. This natural laxative food also supplies vitamin B and contains iron.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal, with milk or cream, or cook into muffins, breads, etc. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed by the Kellogg Company as an effective laxative food for constipation.* Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Aid To Imagination.

Happily for human complacency, distant disasters always have an atmosphere of unreality. Although the sense of pity is strong in the average individual it is difficult for people living in comfort to envisage the full horrors of a famine in China, an earthquake in Japan, or a hurricane in the Caribbean.

We read about these events with regret. We are distressed by the sufferings of fellow human beings. But these sympathetic feelings are momentary. Soon our attention is elsewhere engaged, by something nearer home and nearer also to our comprehension.

Sometimes, however, the misery of others is driven home to us by that touch of personal experience which is the most effective teacher. During the last two days millions in the East who have hitherto looked upon the drought in the Middle West as a terrible but distant misfortune have suddenly discovered what that drought implies. The gardener watching a lawn burn up before his eyes; the housewife standing over her stove while the temperature rises to unbearable heights; the clerk in a sweltering office; the mechanic in a stifling factory—all have suddenly realized a fellow-feeling for the farflung army of unfortunates across the Mississippi.

Compared with what they are suffering, our discomforts are trivial. At worst our comfort and not our means of livelihood is at stake. Here an abundant water supply, available at the turn of a tap, makes it possible for the householder to make good, in part at least, the deficiency of nature. Air-conditioned offices, restaurants, shops and theaters provide temporary relief from the broiling sun. At night there is the cool of running water and miles of park land. But out on the parched prairies, where for days on end men have prayed in vain for rain that would save their crops from burning up, and themselves from disaster, no such respites are available.

Although the discomfort of Washingtonians is comparatively small, yet our imagination has been given a fillip. We know better than before what the victims of the drought are experiencing. A touch of sun has made the whole Nation kin.

The ADA Report.

In the office of the Alley Dwelling Authority hangs a large map of the District of Columbia on which some of the blocks bear numbered thumb-tacks while more are simply colored red. The thumbtacks indicate the locations of rehabilitation projects actually under way; the colored squares represent those areas scheduled for eventual transformation.

A less graphic picture of the ADA's activities is contained in the annual report just published by John Ihlder, the executive director. Those Washingtonians unable to visit his offices to inspect the ADA map should make it a point to study this report. For slum clearance has much more than an abstract interest. The alleys, which owe their existence partly to the sympathy of older residents who admitted newly freed Negroes into their backyards as squatters, are today large contributors to the disgraceful health conditions of the city. And disease, as a glance at the District's annual expenditures for health will confirm, costs many tax dollars.

It would be a disservice to the pleasantly modest report of the ADA if its achievements were exaggerated. The fact is that since May, 1935, a mere 10 of the 200 squares containing inhabited alleys have been purchased. The dwellings therein have been treated in various ways, some having been modernized, others cleared for new construction or parking lots, and others having been sold for improved buildings. This is not a startling accomplishment. But the ADA is not looking for startling accomplishments. Under the terms of its charter, it has until June, 1944, to complete its program. Carefully and methodically, it is proceeding on the slow-but-sure formula.

This is not to suggest that the ADA has no worries. Property owners have cooperated, with the result that purchase prices have kept well within the limit of 130 per cent of assessed value set by Congress. But the Authority has been greatly impeded by lack of funds. The original plan was to provide it with a revolving fund of $15,000,000, of which $3,000,000 was to be used as a starter. As it finally worked out, however, a bare $500,000 was appropriated, later to be supplemented by a $200,000 WPA grant.

This year the House balked at a request for an additional $300,000, though fortunately it was willing to authorize the use of cash on hand. With rents and proceeds from sales included, some $250,000 will thus be available for the current year. This will keep the Authority alive until Congress reconvenes. Then it should be made certain that the ADA will not starve for funds while hundreds of millions of dollars are being squandered on less worthy, albeit more glittering, public undertakings.

Conservation Or Relief?

Former Gov. Lowden of Illinois states in a public interview that Gov. Landon and he both favor payment of bounties to farmers for withdrawing land from cultivation where soil erosion is serious. Such a program, Mr. Lowden explains, would be permanent and would be administered by the States, if possible under the direction of agricultural colleges.

As outlined, this combination subsidy and soil conservation proposal does not differ materially from the policies to which the Roosevelt Administration is committed under the soil conservation act.

Even in respect to decentralization of administration there is no quarrel, since the act contemplates eventual establishment of a permanent State-aid plan, with Federal grants to States having approved machinery for conserving the soil and maintaining the farmers' purchasing power. Indeed, Mr. Lowden not only admitted the similarity between the Democratic program and the Landon-Lowden bounty system, but expressed a hope that both parties could agree on a plan that would take farm relief out of politics.

One of the most serious obstacles to the formulation and execution of a long-time program of agricultural rehabilitation grows out of efforts to attract votes by subsidizing individual farmers. Of course the emphasis should be on expending public funds in ways that would bring a maximum amount of benefit to agriculture as such, and therefore to the country as a whole.

A succession of droughts and floods of disastrous extent have, however, aroused the public to a consciousness of the national scope and extreme complexity of our agricultural problems. It is encouraging to find Secretary Wallace and his official aids now emphasizing the need of physical conservation of our resources instead of concentrating their attention upon the elimination of farm surpluses and increases in farm prices. Even if their actual practices fall short of their announced aspirations, the changed perspective represents some advance.

Furthermore, it would be a mistake to assume that the economic aspects of the farm problem can be neglected while we are trying to preserve our soil riches by combating destructive methods of cultivation. In shifting land from one use to another, the question of markets for agricultural products must be considered as well as the state of consumer demand.

The financial needs of the individual farmer cannot be made the basis for a system of agricultural subsidies masquerading as a soil conservation measure. And there is grave danger that recurrent payments to farmers, by whatever name they may be called, will remain (as they now are) chiefly rewards bestowed for following recognized policies of crop rotation, or concealed bribes for reducing crop output. Certainly there is no justification for paying a farmer year after year not to ruin his land by overcropping unless we proceed upon the assumption that the subsidized farmers are either morons or economic serfs, compelled by pressure of debt or conditions of occupancy to ruin the land they till.

A permanent program to preserve soil fertility, such as Gov. Landon favors, necessarily calls for a Nation-wide control system that would take little account of the boundaries of the individual farm, although the farmer might be paid or compensated for agreeing to co-operate in carrying out the general plan. In the much-quoted and very illuminating report on "Little Waters," prepared for the National Resources Committee, rational regulation and control of water supply to arrest soil erosion is envisaged on an extensive scale. It implies far-reaching adjustments, such as relinquishment of submarginal and marginal cropped land to vegetative cover, or conversion into ponds or marshes; more intensive cultivation of good land; and change of methods of cultivation to prevent erosion and promote infiltration.

Obviously, the execution of such a program cannot be assured by the sort of subsidies dear to the hearts of politicians who want every voting farmer in each State to get a share of the available money. If Federal aid is given indirectly through the medium of the States agreeing to co-operate in a general conservation program, the danger of improper diversion of funds is lessened. But there is at the same time necessity for Federal supervision to make sure that local authorities develop their plans for water control or land use as an integral part of a national program.

If both Republicans and Democrats are really willing to view the farm problem primarily as a matter of the conservation and economical utilization of our land resources in the interest of the Nation, a vexing question will have been taken out of politics. Furthermore, real progress will have been made toward a solution of our farm problem once we conceive of it as a physical as well as an economic issue.

"Hell-Bent For Election."

The resignation of Frank Murphy as American High Commissioner to the Commonwealth of the Philippines is distinctly to be deplored. It is another case of the way in which, particularly under the Roosevelt Administration, partisan considerations are permitted to override major national interests and national responsibilities.

Mr. Murphy very obviously has submitted to the same kind of pressure that compelled Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York to recall his decision to retire from public life at the end of his term. The Democratic high command feels that with Frank Murphy as his party's candidate for Governor of Michigan, President Roosevelt's chances in that crucial and doubtful State will be improved. But from the point of view both of the American and Philippine peoples it is clear that Mr. Murphy is needed far more in Manila than he is in his home State.

As governor general in the period preceding the establishment of the Philippines Commonwealth, and as high commissioner since, Mr. Murphy has won the friendship, esteem and trust of the Philippine people. He has manifested a highly intelligent and sympathetic understanding of their problems, and a deep devotion to their interests. The Filipinos, almost without exception, have learned to look to him, both on personal grounds and as the representative of the Nation to which they have been linked politically and economically for more than a generation, for the guidance they obviously need during this critical transition period between colonial dependence and complete independence.

It is, therefore, a shocking disregard of our great responsibility to the islands—a responsibility which cannot end until complete indpeendence is granted—that the urgent Philippine request for Mr. Murphy to continue at his post should be so lightheartedly disregarded.

Apostle Of Spiritual Unity.

"I think he is going to pull through."

When Dr. S. Parkes Cadman's personal physician issued that statement yesterday, he published good news for thousands of people. For he spoke of a clergyman who has worthily gained and maintained the respect of men and women of every denomination and who has been waging, against death, a fight symbolic of his energetic and courageous life.

Dr. Cadman once described himself as the most catholic of Protestants. He is much else besides. He is a good pulpit orator. Unlike too many orators, he is also a scholar. He has shown himself an excellent critic of the drama—a sound, if not brilliant, critic of general literature. Nevertheless, his most significant characteristic has long been the broad Christian tolerance which he both preached and practiced, and which is so clearly needed at the present time.

In his work for the Golden Rule Federation, still more in his leadership of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, Dr. Cadman's advocacy of spiritual neighborliness opened ears which few other voices reached. At the Lausanne Conference on Faith and Order, attended by clergy of nearly every Christian sect, he proved a power for peace.

Although the gathering could not achieve reality for the good Bishop Brent's dream of complete union, it did draw the churches near to a realization of how all must work together for social betterment, for brotherly love, for the formation of a common front against evil. And, humanly speaking, that was in no small degree the result of this Westerner's collaboration with the delegates from the Near East.

Dr. Cadman has consistently taught that—though creeds differ, and though each man should follow his own faith—all men should co-operate in the realm of conduct. Christendom would be the poorer for his loss.

A sign frequently seen is, "Danger—Men at Work." But there's more danger when men aren't at work.

And if you can't afford to buy a tent for summer camping-out, you can rent a bathing suit and sneak off with it.

There ought to be a law under which radio comedians could be prosecuted for kidnaping brain children.

Slaves Of The Lamp.

Stanton C. Crawford in the Scientific Monthly.

Animals that live most of their active lives in the darkness of night and shun the light seem to be prisoners of that darkness in a very real sense . . . For each species there is an optimum light range, which members of the group seek as a setting for the normal activities of life. The degree of intensity is supposedly determined by the visual sense.

Thus, most butterflies are attuned to a higher intensity of light than are many moths. Bright sunlight attracts the one, repels the other. The tawny monarch flits over the meadows, visiting milkweed blossoms, or floats high over city streets, while the nocturnal moth clings to the bark of a shaded tree trunk, which it often closely resembles. But let darkness fall, and the butterfly hangs motionless on a leaf.

The weak flame of a candle, so dim a light as not to stimulate the butterfly at all, serves as an irresistible and fatal attraction to the moth. Light traps are now employed to catch such orchard pests as codling moths, bud moths, leaf rollers, cutworm moths and other insects. The flight of the moth toward the lamp is so nearly automatic that it can not save itself.

"Twisting Simple English."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Re your editorial and the cartoon in The Post of July 5 on the subject of the steel business and the unions:

At least the steel men are assured a living whether they work or not since we are assured, today, that the Administration will feed these men should they decide to go on strike and refuse to work. Since this has been the usual plan employed by the unions we can reasonably expect that if they are successful to any moderate degree in carrying out their threatened invasion of the steel ranks there will be a strike. Picket groups will follow which will not permit those who desire to continue their employment to do so.

This same plan to feed men who refuse to work, bear in mind, is put forth by the Administration which has spent some billions of dollars of unearned tax money in an attempt to provide jobs for those poor unfortunates who are without employment.

Right here, Mr. Editor, is where there is something radically wrong with the picture. Undoubtedly, as you say, men who work should be permitted to organize and bargain. On the other hand do you not also grant to those who have furnished the $5,000,000,000 to build this great steel business the right to have some word in the conduct of their business?

We have been treated, during recent months, to the spectacle of men who have quit jobs which were paying them at least a living and who have in several instances undertaken to deny other workmen the right to go ahead and earn their livings. And not only that, but these striking men have gone out and have deliberately destroyed property belonging to someone else—in direct violation of law.

So long as we are told, as we frequently are told by the heads of the labor federation, that more than ten million men in this country are out of work and at least half this number are on Government relief, there can be no excuse advanced for calling men out of gainful occupation to swell the ranks of this unemployed army. It would appear that the Administration is making a serious mistake to announce, in advance, that men who walk out of regular work and refuse to work will be taken care of with tax money—and unearned tax money at that. We have a law against allowing a combination of businesses to operate in restraint of trade.

When we can get on our statute books laws which will require the unions to assume responsibility for the acts of its members we will be much nearer the Utopia some of us think we are striving for.

In the meantime, what say that we invoke the American spirit of fair play and grant the owners of the businesses the right to have at least a little to say about the operation of their own affairs?

N. G. SHEROUSE.

Washington, July 6.

From A Business Standpoint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Now that election year is here there will be all kinds of propaganda and promises made that will be impossible to fulfill. Let us look at the situation from a business standpoint and forget all about the political aspect.

Regardless of what party is in power, the conditions that cause unemployment and consequently bring on depressions will not and cannot change unless common sense and scientific methods are used in conducting business.

As long as chain stores are permitted to go into all kinds of merchandising, the small merchant will not have a chance, and it will be impossible for the chain stores to absorb all the unemployed.

There is a marked tendency to mislead the purchasing public, through the medium of advertisements, by making exaggerated claims about the merchandise dispensed. The public is enticed to purchase unnecessary and more expensive products than their financial status will warrant by offering unsound credit.

Analyze the above statements and then you will understand why business is never stabilized.

Civil Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

According to the papers, some 17,000 hopeful applicants are busy taking the examination for junior and senior typist and junior and senior stenographer. According to past statistics, about 4,500 will pass, thus placing their names on the civil service rolls, to wait hopefully, in some cases several years, for a call to serve Uncle Sam. In the meantime their speed will have settled down to the average dictation speed, which is far below the examination requirements. Why will so many fail?

The civil service requires that a senior stenographer must be able to take dictation at the rate of 120 words a minute, yet the average man in the course of daily dictation rarely dictates more than an average of 85 words a minute, less than the requirement for a junior stenographer. Young girls just out of business school, with no business experience, will comprise the greater part of the successful applicants. They will, of course, have high ratings. They will replace the many people on temporary appointments (temporary because of a non-civil service rating). This temporary personnel, in most cases, is efficient and experienced, yet they must go.

It seems to me that when a person has shown during the time of his temporary appointment to be a person of ability and efficiency, and when there actually exists an opening to be filled, that there should be some provision giving that person a civil service rating, based on efficiency and quality of the work performed during his temporary appointment.

I venture to say that not one out of every five stenographers or secretaries who have had civil service ratings for any time at all could successfully pass the examination now being given. Why not have a yearly examination for all stenographers and throw out those who do not pass the civil service requirement, or demote those whose speed has fallen below 96 or 120 words a minute? It would be just as sensible as throwing out efficient and experienced temporary help.

A TEMPORARY EMPLOYE.

Washington, July 7.

The Mexican Highway.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In your editorial "The Mexican Highway" published July 3, you stressed the importance of the highway as a cultural link between this country and our neighbor to the south. This highway will, indeed "mean new thoughts, new designs, new language and new customs, for no swamp is too deep and no gorge too broad when peace is the engineer's guerdon and commerce his backer's reward."

It is highly gratifying, therefore, to know that you foster an educational movement which tends to bring nations to a better and clearer understanding. If other newspapers follow your example and continue to stress the accomplishments of nations in the arts and sciences rather than warfare, we shall gradually eliminate class and race hatred and prejudice.

The 'Royalists.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

G. M. Beerbower desires help to identify the "royalists" referred to by the President. Those royalists are employers who refuse to give employes all they want for what they choose to do. It will be too bad for private employers after F. D. R. wins the next election.

The Government will need all the clerks to keep records of all work done by every citizen in estimating everybody's old age benefits and all the builders to erect buildings to keep clerks and records in.

We sots, bums, strikers and laborers hope the voters give our sympathetic dictator and us a big hand next election and put us over the top. Don't forget to thank grasshoppers and God for bringing prosperity to so many of our farmers.

Comments On Washington Traffic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Safety in traffic still depends upon common sense. Reliance must be placed not only on the trafficians but on John Walker's ability to see, think and act.

Many sermons have been preached on the virtues of implicit obedience, but somehow when the crossing is clear human nature succumbs to the temptation to cross. Undoubtedly Caspar Milquetoast would not only deem it inadvisable to dodge cars but imperative to obey the rules, thus spending most of his time doing a stand-and-wait while more intrepid souls flouted the law and got across with impunity. No doubt Gen. Johnson would wait for the light and then march firmly in front of screeching brakes and exasperated drivers. But the average hiker is apt to take his traffic as he finds it, his main concern being the exigencies of the moment, and get by in any manner the situation warrants. If the rules aid him in crossing the street, well and good; if not, so much the worse for the rules.

The fact is that many are jay walkers because they don't believe that obeying laws is identical with common sense. They feel it is better to get there than to wait timidly or argue with sudden death. In short they don't believe the rules are reliable; and this situation is going to continue as long as traffic regulations do not protect their interests. Despite eulogies to the contrary, laws seldom get more respect than the public thinks they are entitled to.

J. H. BOYER.

Washington, July 9.

To the Editor of The Post——Sir:

You can exert a strong influence toward improving traffic conditions by advocating these practical measures:

1. Many of the city's several hundred parks are little more than a barren waste, a few of them disgraces to the city and a habitat of transient undesirables. Respectable people hesitate to enter some of them, and rightly so. Transforming a number of these parks, at strategic locations, into parking facilities under competent supervision would take thousands of vehicles off of the streets and relieve much congestion. Motorists would gladly pay a small parking fee of five or ten cents and this income would defray all expenses incident to the project and allow for systematic arrangement of the cars parking and for the beautification of the parks.

2. Install a system of timed traffic lights on the more important and through streets, so that an automobile traveling about 22 miles an hour can go through the city "on the green" without stopping.

3. Eliminate the circles, which are as great a hazard to the driver and contribute as much to the traffic snarls as any other single thing.

4. Build a subway. Washington has outgrown its antiquated street car system, overcrowded busses, and the need for 4,000 cabs.

I write this letter as a citizen who is forced to pay 25 cents or 35 cents to park his car each day simply because I do not begin work at 8 or 8:30 a. m., when a few parking spaces are available and because I do not "rate" a parking reservation or a space in the garage of the department for which I work.

The Post Impressionist

Phonetics On The Air.

Post Office, Saturday.

WHY not an American Advisory Committee on Pronunciation for Radio Speakers?

Something semi-official to guide those professional air-talkers who haven't time to turn directly to a dictionary, and to direct those amateur air-talkers (political and educational) who haven't the dictionary-inclination?

Such a body could calm, anyhow, the indignation of all these people who are writing letters to the Editor of The Post about the errors of the orators at the Cleveland and Philadelphia conventions. It might even calm the Post-Impressionist's peevishness as expressed on this subject a couple of columns ago.

The British have much such a committee.

It seems that London traffic authorities, laudably wanting to ease congestion in Parliament Square decided to make it one-way territory—and to broadcast the decision. However, instead of "one way," the formal notice employed the word "gyratory," not only completely confusing the motorists, but ruthlessly ruining the radio announcers. London was commanded to treat that portion of its topography as

"Jyr-atory,"
"Jy-rat-tory,"
"Guy-ratory,"
"Guy-ray-tory,"
And "guy-ra-toe-ry."

Intellectual, not to mention vehicular, riot resulted. So there also eventually resulted the British Broadcasting Company's Advisory Committee on Spoken English.

This was in 1926—and none too soon.

The cruel and barbarous treatment being accorded American place-names by British broadcasters—and others—was already in peril of being declared a violation of the most-favored-nation clause in our commercial understandings with the Empire. Poughkeepsie and Schenectady! Ramsay MacDonald—according to Frank Simonds—always called Washington's river the Pot-omac. And, writing in Talks, that quarterly digest issued by the Columbia Broadcasting people, Lloyd James, from whose article we get most of this information, declares, even today:

"Whether 'Chicago' is 'Chicaago' or 'Chicawgo' is more than I have been able to discover."

And Dr. James is a professor of phonetics and the present prop of the B. B. C.'s A. C. on S. E.!

Indeed, it would be strange if the people of the United Kingdom didn't have some troubles with their own place-names. Dr. James had to fight for "Daventry," as spelled, against the old "Dain-try."

What chance, then, had Scotch Lochboisdale and Welsh Llanfairpwllgwyngell?

Yet news, as Dr. James points out, "comes in from all over the world, and words, names, that we can read silently in our papers, must be pronounced when sent over the air."

Poor Robert Bridges, John Masefield's immediate predecessor as poet-laureate, was drafted as the committee's first chairman. Following him came Shaw, the only author who ever wrote a drama on phonetics—even if "Pygmalion" is not among his best works.

"From 1926 to the present day," writes Dr. James, the A. C. on S. E. "has discussed hundreds of words which, although well known by sight, nobody knew how to pronounce. We consult every reputable dictionary, and have laid it down from the start that American dictionaries are always to be consulted in addition to British."

'Isn't that magnificent British magnanimity?

We should like to know the publication-offices of the disreputable dictionaries that lurk in the shadows of the Jamesian mind.

And whether they are British!

"In the case of new words"—so vital to radio-speech—"I find out before the (Committee's) meeting," says Dr. James, "what is the general pronunciation used among the scholars . . . who most frequently use them. This information is sent to the four specialist members. . . . We meet and make recommendations which are, in turn, considered by the full committee of some two dozen men and women eminent in literature, in academic and scholastic life. The final recommendations are published provisionally, so that the general public can have the opportunity of making comment, and in no case are they considered final until they have been again considered in the light of this public criticism.

"This may seem a long and tedious machinery, but I believe it to be the one and only right way to handle what is after all a very vital question."

* * * *

Not quite the only right way—not quite! We could indeed wish an American advisory commitee for radio speakers, but it would have to make a few changes from the British procedure. It would, for instance, have to sit at one end of a telephone—and sit continuously.

Ballyhoo At Olympics.

Just to keep the record straight let us see who it was that introduced politics and religion into the Olympic games of 1936.

Germany was awarded these games four years ago. But that was another Germany.

At that time the international body which selected the site acted on the supposition that certain essential sporting conditions could be guaranteed this year. If the committee had had any idea that four years later the games would be used to ballyhoo Adolf Hitler and to indorse a regime of murder, persecution and paganism the program would have been awarded to some other country.

Nobody elsewhere has any right to give a damn whether the Germans murder each other, abolish free thought, speech and courts and worship at the sign of the spinning pinwheel. That is their own tough luck, and we have troubles of our own.

But no country has any right to use the Olympic games and the beautiful Olympic ideal of brotherhood through sportsmanship—which is a pretty nice ideal, however pathetic—as a signboard on which to 24-sheet its politics and hatreds.

• • • •

In four years sport in Germany has become a politico-military monopoly of the state. All young men and women who are barred from the Nazi party or refuse to join it as a matter of principle are automatically barred from the team. That is a clear introduction of political and religious qualifications into the Olympic games—and it didn't originate here, but in Germany.

The Nazis have made two exceptions, but they made them under pressure from the outside in fear of losing the games. So much for their devotion to their principles.

The Nazis often point out that American Negroes are victims of discrimination, and this is not to deny that they are. But Negroes are not barred from our Olympic teams. Many of them have worn the American shield in the past, and some of the most formidable athletes on this year's squad are colored.

A Nazi political book called "Knowledge About Germany," by Kurt Muench, described as "Reich Political Trainer," gives information on the status of sport in the country which bids the athletes of the world welcome in the brotherdhood of sport.

It says: "Athletes and sport are the preparatory school of the political will in the service of the state. Non-political, so-called neutral sportsmen are unthinkable in Hitler's state." It also says that sport in Germany cannot be separated from politics.

• • • •

The official Nazi propaganda press has made unguarded admissions time and again that these games are to be exploited to the utmost as political propaganda for a party whose fundamental principles are at war with everything that Americanism stands for. That propaganda will defeat itself because it will be done in the usual dumb, clumsy way, but that is not the question. The question is, "Who introduced politics and religion into the Olympic games?"

Three days out of eight, in Garmisch, the Nazis sent in Hitler to hog the show, and on other days they sent in Goebbels and Julius Streicher and their generals. Their army was all over the place, and when it came time to salute the national anthems they played not one anthem but two. And they manipulated things so that a lot of American athletes were put on the spot and more or less compelled to abandon the Olympic salute and give instead the Nazi political salute.

If similar conditions had prevailed in Los Angeles in 1932 the Republican party would have barred all non-Republicans from the American team. President Hoover and his cabinet would have stolen the show for a political demonstration in a campaign year. And the army and navy would have shoved the people hither and yon to show how strong the Republican party was.

• • • •

Of course, nothing of the kind happened. Hoover didn't even show up, and Vice President Curtis just dropped in to give the show a brief Government send-off, then beat it. Nobody attempted to ballyhoo the blessings of free speech, free press, free courts, freedom of religion and democracy. Everybody just relaxed and had a perfectly swell time, unconscious of political rivalries, which were pretty hot just then, and of everything but sport.

The American Olympic committee has been raising a faint whine of "politics and religion" lately to cover its own incompetence in financing the team. No doubt about it, politics and religion are involved this year. But nobody in this country started that, and the American Olympic authorities have always used the tin cup to raise their money.

At a time when farms are burning up, herds are dying and millions of Americans are nickeling along on the dole the deficit can reasonably be charged to natural causes, including the committee's own failure.

Five Million Reported Dead in China Famine

Chengtu, Szechuen Province, China, July 10 (AP).—Famine has killed 5,000,000 persons in Northern Szechuen Province, Chinese relief workers estimated today.

Millions of other residents are considered doomed to death in the worst drought the province has ever experienced. Other millions will be affected before new crops can be harvested.

National provincial authorities are laboring to relieve the stricken population while banks of the central government are financing rehabilitation projects on a scale not before known in China.

In Czechoslovakia

Konrad Henlein Emerges As Champion Of German Minority But Loudly Disclaims Ambitions To Introduce Dictatorship

By Judith Listowel.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Prague.

IN THE CZECH elections of 1935 a new party, the Sudetendeutsche Partei, polled the largest number of votes. Three-quarters of the German minority in the Czech Republic voted for it; and overnight Konrad Henlein, the leader of the party, became a figure of world interest. Who is he? Where has he suddenly come from? How has he managed to unite in one block the vast majority of the German inhabitants of Czechoslovakia? These are the questions asked in all circles, culminating in the most vital of all: Is Konrad Henlein a tool for Hitler?

Konrad Henlein started his career in 1931 as a teacher of gymnastics at Asch, a small town in the westernmost corner of Czechoslovakia. He springs from impoverished lower-middle class stock and had the customary education of a lad of his means who qualifies for the teaching profession. Henlein was extremely popular from his earliest days, and many long urged him to go into politics and to utilize his "magnetic personality" for the benefit of his fellow nationals. But Konrad Henlein did not want to do so. He genuinely preferred to teach gymnastics to squabbling with corrupt politicians.

Two movements, however, taking shape side by side, revolutionized the fate of the Germans within Czechoslovakia's borders and galvanized Konrad Henlein into the adoption of an active political career. On the one hand, National Socialism in Germany grew stronger and stronger, until in January, 1933, Hitler became Chancellor, and in March of the same year, dictator of the Reich. On the other hand, Czech politicians had not practiced that tolerance to their minorities which, in accordance with the Treaty of Versailles, they had pledged themselves to exercise.

From 1919 onwards the Germans of Czechoslovakia had often voiced grievances. But previous to the world depression their highly industrialized districts had found compensation at least in the economic well being, the result of increasing exports. But after 1929 they had to fall back more and more on home markets and here they were faced by a deliberate preferential treatment accorded to Czech industrialists.

Czechs Have Monopolized Public Service Jobs.

DURING the depression the latent resentment at Czech nationals practically monopolizing public services grew rapidly to outspoken bitterness. For instance, the percentage of German railway officials in the Sudetenland was 57 per cent in 1920 and 30 per cent in 1930! Since then the number of Germans has further decreased. The situation is the same in the post office and various other government departments; only in the foreign office at Prague can one find a few "show" Germans.

The least that has to be admitted is that the Czech nationalist elements have been far from tactful in pressing their advantages. In a country in which the ruling nationality forms a bare 50 per cent of the inhabitants, while the German element accounts for almost 25 per cent, this is very unfortunate.

The combination of justified German grievances within the Czech Republic, with the wildly nationalist Hitlerian victory across the frontier, would under any circumstances have created a tense situation. The chances of working out a peaceful solution were not improved by the panicky fear of the Czechs.

They pride themselves on their broadminded democratic system; yet since 1932 the successive trials of Germans accused of spreading Nazi doctrines gave a certain ground of anxiety to those observers who were filled with misgiving about Czechslovak democratic processes. The Germans saw in these measures further attacks on their position as the greatest minority in the state and pointed to the Czech "National Socialists" and General Cajda's "Fascists," as evidence that the authorities objected to their nationality, not to their creed.

It is a fact, often overlooked, that "national socialism" was born in Bohemia in 1904. The National Socialist Workers' Party was founded in 1907 and split into two parts after the war. The German branch carried on under Drexler, later with Hitler as second in command. The Bohemian branch was led by Robert Jung and Anton Knirsch. At the last joint party congress in 1920 Hitler imbibed his wildly anti-semitic principles from Jung.

When the National Socialist Workers' Party of Czechoslovakia dissolved itself in October, 1933—24 hours previous to the official banning of the party—Jung and his companions abdicated their leadership. Their mandates were declared void and they were thrown into prison. Two days later Konrad Henlein came forward with a manifesto, calling on all Germans within the republic to form a common front, a "Heimatsfront." It may have been a surprise to him as well as to the rest of the world that less than two years later the previously warring German factions followed his appeal to the extent of giving him three-fourths of all their votes.

Henlein's Personality A Factor In His Success.

HENLEIN'S personality accounts for part of his success. He is a good speaker, absolutely honest and genuine; simple enough to carry the masses by his inspired enthusiasm; sufficiently erudite to impress the educated classes by his sensible arguments. His program could not but appeal to all Germans, especially as their nationalistic feelings were roused both by Czech "mistakes" and Reich-German sucesses.

Henlein's demands can be grouped under three headings. In the first place he wants a fairer deal for the German minority. His is the strongest party in the state and its members feel that they have some claim to participation in the government. At present the German Social Democrats and the German Agrarians have each a representative in the government; yet the Sudetendeutsche Partei—compared to which they are tiny fractions—has not been given any share in office.

Secondly, Henlein wants an equitable share for his followers, proportionate to their numbers, in the administrative and state services.

Thirdly, the Sudetendeutsche Partei is aiming at autonomy in cultural matters, particularly regarding schools, and the use of the German language.

Henlein himself has professed again and again his absolute loyalty to the Czech state. He is most anxious to effect a reconciliation with the Czechs and he has never tired of pointing out that in case of any war between Germany and Czechoslovakia the Sudetenland could not avoid becoming the common battlefield. There can be no question of Henlein's sincerity in these professions. It is his greatest drawback in the eyes of his own followers, many of whom would rejoice in a more extreme course. Henlein's most serious difficulty is to restrain them from embarking on wilder policies, and for this reason he has to strike a strongly nationalist note on occasion to pacify the extreme ranks of his group.

Henlein cannot be accused of private ambitions either. Though leader of the Sudetendeutsche Partei, he did not himself stand as candidate for Parliament, contenting himself with addressing over 80 meetings during the bare month allowed for the election campaign. In the course of this time an attempt was made on his life, and seven bullet holes drilled in the back of his motor car. He escaped unhurt. For salary he draws exactly the sum he used to receive as teacher of gymnastics—about ten dollars a week.

Leader Denies Party Is Nazi Offshoot.

THE MOST ticklish question is of course, whether the Sudetendeutsche Partei is Nazi? Koinrad Henlein himself has always hotly denied this. Long before he played an active part in politics, he repeatedly explained to his friends that National Socialism may be good for the Reich, but it does not follow that it is good for export. He, as well as his friends, are very much concerned about the interpretation the world press puts on their movement and bitterly resent that it was hailed as a "Nazi victory."

Moreover, Henlein has asserted on every possible occasion that he is not in favor of a dictatorship. He says that the establishment of a totalitarian state would be fatal to minorities, in the first place. Most important of all, Henlein is not an anti-Semitic. This is the reason why he could rally around him the vast majority of the German element and successfully establish a German front—a task Jung could never have achieved.

King George's Yacht Sunk in Night 'Funeral'

Cowes, England, July 10 (AP).—The Britannia, racing yacht of the late King George, lay on the bottom of the English Channel today after a strange midnight funeral ceremony.

The dismantled hull was sunk by a charge of explosive which tore a huge hole in the ship's bottom.

The final ceremony carried out the provisions of the monarch's will which ordered the yacht destroyed if none of his four sons desired her.

Led by Capt. A. B. Turner, the Britannia's skipper, the crews of two destroyers which towed the yacht out into the Channel stood at attention as she disappeared beneath the water.

Social Security Plan Unsound, Aldrich Asserts

Institute of Public Affairs Told Nation Must Take Step Slowly.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., July 10.—Individual social security cannot be gained if aggregate security is undetermined, Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of directors of the Chase National Bank of New York, warned a public meeting of the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia tonight.

Social security in its widest sense means not merely security for certain individuals or groups, however needy or worthy, but security for the productive system as a whole, said Mr. Aldrich.

"We cannot have piecemeal security at the cost of aggregate insecurity. We must not aim solely at the security of special groups and neglect the security of all."

The Federal social security act of 1935 is a response to the demand that was one of the consequences, he pointed out, of the condition during the last seven years when "millions of our people have known what it is to be unemployed, to tramp the streets daily, to watch their scanty savings melt away, to lose faith in themselves, to succumb to despondency and despair."

Outlines Plan.

Mr. Aldrich outlined the plan of contributory old-age insurance and said that according to the Federal act a reserve fund would be set up which would by 1980 reach $47,000,000 and still be growing, according to estimates. He said that the theory behind this "self-sustaining" plan was well-intentioned, but he opposed it as unnecessary. Its value would be fictitious, he added, because the reserve could be invested only in the Government's own securities, and that the Government would be merely borrowing from itself to pay itself interest.

He criticized the 6 per cent tax on pay rolls as dangerously high, and voiced his conviction that economic law would eventually shift the amount of tax payable by employes almost entirely to labor.

"Let us drop the contributory old-age pensions passed on pay-roll taxes and taxes on wages for special classes of workers," he said, "and let us concentrate on the system of grants in aid to the States for the assistance of all the needy aged in such a way and on such a scale that we shall do this thing adequately in our own time and generation to the extent that we can afford to do it. And let us do it on a current cost basis, so that we shall know what it costs and shall know whether we can afford it."

Social Credit Talks.

In continuing this afternoon the social conference on "Power Age Economics" that opened yesterday, talks on social credit were made by Paul Hampden, associate editor of the New Democracy and son of the noted actor, Walter Hampden, and by Edward F. Harvey, economist and author, of Gwynedd Valley, Pa.

Mr. Hampden said that in the economic analysis, first offered by Maj. C. H. Douglas, the British engineer-economist, there was found in the relationship between commercial and industrial accountancy on the one hand and banking accountancy or money creation on the other an explanation for many of the current major economic phenomena.

The Goldsborough bill establishing social credit, introduced into Congress by Senator Goldsborough, of Maryland, was explained by Mr. Harvey, who said that Henry Ford and Andrew Carnegie have shown the way to success of mass production by cheapening their products and that they will stand out as pioneers of an improved economic order which is potential behind "power economy."

Arthur A. Ballentine, New York attorney and former Undersecretary of the Treasury of the United States under President Hoover, made a plea for a balancing of the Federal budget in a talk before the round-table on current problems in business and finance.

The present Administration policy of borrowing and spending, he said, "erodes the financial resources of the country just as improvident cultivation of soil destroys the permanent support of agriculture.

"What has been happening, therefore, is that the Government through its policy of spending far more than its revenues is gradually taking over the resources of the banks and insurance companies, substituting Government I. O. U.'s for the normal varied business investments of these institutions," he asserted.

Wheat Crop Below Estimate

had occurred. But they pointed out that every rainless day from now on will mean a decline of thousands of dollars in the value of the vital corn crop.

Small grains, sugar beets and potatoes, and other vegetables were being killed in many places. As water fell in streams throughout the East water commissioners began to worry. Milk supplies are threatened in New York and New Jersey, authorities said.

Cattle Being Moved.

Throughout the drought areas the movement of bony cattle out of grassless, waterless regions toward feeding places grew heavier yesterday. The special low freight rates proclaimed by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the railroads were a primary factor in the increasingly heavy trek out of the drought territories. Aid will be given the small cattlemen unable to ship their cattle away, and cattle purchases will be held to a minimum, officials said here, in order to allow these small-herd owners to retain title to their breeding stock.

The crop report released yesterday, from figures compiled before the drought hit its worst stretch, was regarded as conservative by veteran observers.

Tugwell, after his White House visit yesterday, summoned RA directors of Montana, Wyoming, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota and Kansas to a conference in Washington on Monday.

No Worry Over Supply.

The food supply was not a matter of major concern in Washington as yet, informed sources held. They pointed to the crop estimates, which showed that the wheat crop of 638,399,000 bushels, added to a carry-over of 125,000,000 bushels, would be ample to suply the annual consumption of about 634,000,000 bushels in this country.

The President, in answer to a question at his press conference, said that he was planning to go ahead with the shelter belt project to protect the Western plain area from wind storms, but said the funds appropriated for the action would be used mostly in seeding trees.

The President was reminded that Congress had appropriated the sum mentioned specifically to liquidate the project, not to maintain it. The President pursed his lips questioningly and then stated he hadn't seen the bill.

Three new slight modifications of the soil conservation plan were announced by the AAA yesterday, chiefly applicable to Minnesota.

370 Dead in Heat

high of 102.3 set an all-time record. Sixteen were dead from the heat on Manhattan, and 15 died in up-State New York.

Seventy-five women employes in a sewing project of the WPA collapsed at work, and five were removed to hospitals, while the others were treated and sent to their homes.

Hundred-degree heat was the standard from Kansas to Connecticut.

New England's toll was 27, and Pennsylvania's 14. A half holiday was called at a WPA sewing project in New York City when 75 women collapsed at their machines.

City employes, with the exception of policemen and firemen, were dismissed early by Mayor La Guardia.

At Detroit, automobile plant physicians credited ordinary salt with almost completely solving the problem of heat prostration among the workers.

Since salt tablets have been made available, they said, several factories have not had a single case of heat exhaustion. The tablets, according to the Associated Press, contain 10 grains or one teaspoonful of pure sodium chloride apiece. They are available in many drinking fountains of the factories.

Blames Salt Loss.

Dr. E. R. Harris said last night in Detroit that the principal cause of heat exhaustion is the loss of salt from the blood stream through profuse perspiration, and urged plant workers to take from 10 to a dozen tablets daily.

In Chicago, the Associated Press reporæd, the Lake Michigan breeze gave up a ten-day duel with the heat, and a reading of 102 was recorded, first in two years.

From Troy, N. Y., the Associated Press reported 29 members of the New York Women's Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars were overcome by the intense heat, throwing an election session of the group into confusion and hysteria.

The temperature had reached 104 at the time the first woman dropped. More than 900 persons had crowded into the packed hall. Most of them were visitors. None of the victims was in serious condition.

Tens of thousands of citizens in many sections of the country sought relief from the heat on beaches, and scarcely an hour passed without some fresh drowning victim being added to the heat wave's mounting toll.

Beer sales jumped in many cities along with the temperatures. Milwaukee brewers reported business up 75 per cent in the last three days and most of the breweries went on a 24-hour schedule.

Sixteen women sewing relief clothing and mending toys on a WPA project were overcome in Milwaukee as they worked. Thirty others, too weak to work, went home.

Storms Off Spain.

London, July 10 (AP).—It was "wish you were here" weather on England's south coast today, with slushy, icy, hail in the streets at Eastbourne and a spotted weather map on the continent.

Europe found time to sympathize with sweltering America while viewing conditions that ranged from serious storms off the northern Spanish coast to bright and balmy skies in parts of the midcontinent.

Twenty deaths, most of them fishermen lost at sea, were reported in northern Spain.

Britain, with rain over most of the country cancelling numerous sports events, had the most freakish conditions.

During the height of a 2-inch rain and hail storm at Eastbourne, lightning struck the excursion steamer Brighton Belle, injuring the captain and the wireless operator.

Houses Flooded.

Houses and shops were flooded, pedestrians knocked down and cyclists swept off their machines by the rush of water in the town's main shopping street.

In London, where the maximum temperature was 63, one evening paper banner-lined: "Snowballing on South Coast."

In mid-Europe Austria had a bright day with the mercury around 80 following heavy rains yesterday and storms earlier in the week. Rain fell over parts of Germany, cooling off following a heat wave. Berlin was bright and balmy.

Italy's North African possessions were the coolest spots in the New Empire, however. A summer sun beat down on the homeland. Foggia, among the Apennines, saw 98.6 in the shade; Rome, 87.9. It was only 82 in Tripoli.

Czech Industries Put Under Military Control

Praha, Czechoslovakia, July 10 (AP).—Virtually all Czech industries were placed under state military control under a law made public today.

Industries regarded as important in time of war must henceforth be registered with the war ministry. A supervisor will be appointed for each.

Persons deemed "politically unreliable" may not be employed, and foreigners may work in the industries only by special permission.

Leaves

employe is in contact with a contagious disease that either requires his attendance or jeopardizes the safety of his fellow employes.

Clearing up some confusion that arose from the retroactive features of the law, the executive order states that if sick leave in excess of one and one-quarter days a month was taken between January 1, the date to which the law was made retroactive, and March 14, when the act was passed, the extra time is chargeable against sick leave subsequently accruing.

Where an employe who was not entitled to sick leave under the old law took the time out and charged it against his annual leave or leave without pay, he may not substitute sick leave as it accumulates.

The rules provide that when an employe is separated from the service he is entitled to all leave he has accumulated. However, in cases of voluntary separation or removal for cause, any employe who has taken an advance on sick leave must make restitution. This does not apply in case of death.

Temporary employes get the regular day and a quarter sick leave each month, under the rules, but no advances and appointments for six months or under are circumscribed by this rule.

A joker in the leave law allows temporary Government employes two and a half days' vacation leave per month, while permanent employes get only two and a sixth days. This amounts to four working days, difference in the course of a year.

Roosevelt Acts To Shift Relief Labor to PWA

Orders Transfer of Able Workers From WPA to Jobs Projects.

President Roosevelt acted yesterday to start machinery for shifting some of the relief workers from the Works Progress Administration, headed by Harry L. Hopkins, to the Public Works Administration, headed by Secretary Harold L. Ickes.

The President received a list of $50,000,000 in projects from the Ickes organization. These projects are ready to be started under the new relief act recently passed by Congress, which will permit the PWA to use a revolving fund of about $450,000,000 for new projects.

Mr. Roosevelt ordered PWA officials to check back on the projects to learn how many persons could be taken from relief rolls to do the work. He said that the projects which offered the most jobs to persons on relief rolls would be given first consideration.

The President said that there still are more able-bodied people on relief than can be taken care of during the next fiscal year by the $1,425,000,000 appropriated by Congress to the Hopkins organization, and that the more workers who could be transferred to Public Works the longer the Hopkins money would last. He added that he expected that industry also would take up some of the number.

The President's discussion again called attention to the fact that the next Congress probably will be asked to appropriate more relief money to be used before the end of the present fiscal year, June 30, 1937.

PWA officials said that State administrators would be instructed at once to obtain information as to how many relief employes could be used on each project.

Fort Is Scene Of O'Malley, Strauss Rites

Daughter of Commander Becomes Bride of Lieutenant.

Many Notables Attend Colorful Affair in Post Chapel.

The post chapel at Fort Myer was the scene of the wedding last night of Miss Betty O'Malley, daughter of Commander and Mrs. John O'Malley, to Lieut. Robert Hollis Strauss, U. S. A., son of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Harold A. Strauss, of Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio. The ceremony was performed by Chaplain Ralph C. Deibert at 8 o'clock.

Palms, massed with oak leaves, were banked behind the chancel rail; and the altar was lighted with white tapers and had salmon-colored gladioli in vases at either side.

Miss Anne Lawton was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Patty Parker, of Washington; Miss Juliet Kemp, of Santa Barbara, Calif.; Miss Helen Frank, of Mitchel Field, Long Island, and Miss Byrl Summers and Miss Bette Hartz, of Washington.

The bride's sister, little Miss Joanna O'Malley, was flower girl, and Master Robbie Robertson, son of Capt. and Mrs. W. A. R. Robertson, was ring bearer. He wore a replica of his father's uniform as a member of the British Royal Air Corps during the war.

Lieut. John Tugh was best man, and the ushers were Capt. William A. R. Robertson, Capt. William Ritchie, Lieut. Jonathan Seaman, Lieut. John Pugh, Lieut. Scott Dixon and Lieut. Brooke Allen.

Given Away by Father.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin with a standing collar of rare old lace, and a tulle veil held in place by a lace coronet. She carried a bouquet formed of fern, lilies of the valley and white rosebuds in a spray which reached to the bottom of her gown.

The maid of honor wore a frock of American beauty net over satin, a net hat and shoes of the same shade, and carried American beauty roses arranged like the bridal bouquet, the green fern affording contrast against the flowers and the dress.

The bridesmaids wore similar gowns of aquamarine net over satin and aquamarine shoes and hat to match, and carried bouquets of pink rosebuds and lilies of the valley reaching to the hems of their dresses.

The bridal couple left the chapel through an aisle formed by the crossed swords of the ushers.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at the Army and Navy Country Club, on the roof garden. The bridal party, including the little flower girl and ring bearer received, assisted by the parents of the bride and bridegroom. They stood beneath an arbor formed of palms and oak leaves. The bride's mother wore a gown of grey chiffon, trimmed in cerise, with a cerise hat, and the bridegroom's mother wore white, with orchid accessories, and both wore corsages of gardenias.

Notables Present.

Among the guests were the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos, the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. R. Walton Moore, with his sisters, the Misses Margaret and Jennie Moore; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Oscar Westover, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William Conger Pratt, Brig. Gen. and Maj. Gen. William Connor, superintendent of West Point, and uncle of the bridegroom, Col. and Mrs. Harold Strauss, parents of the bridegroom; Capt. and Mrs. Ross McIntire, Mrs. George Barnett, Dr. and Mrs. George Trible, Mrs. Hugh Matthews, and Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr.

Among the guests from out of town were Maj. Gen. and Mrs Frank Andrews and their daughter, Miss Josephine Andrews and Maj. and Mrs. Max Lawton, of Langley Field; Lieut. Col. Senator Vic Donahey, of Ohio, celebrated his sixty-third birthday Tuesday by taking his two young grandsons—Donahey and Edward Ogden—sons of Mr. and Mrs. Park Ogden, of Steubenville, Ohio, on a fishing trip aboard his cabin cruiser, The Ohio, on Chesapeake Bay. Senator Donahey and the two boys left the Washington waterfront July 4 and the latest news from them is that they have been having real fishermen's luck.

Mrs. Donahey is remaining at the Broadmoor until her husband and grandsons return. Her own birthday was on July 3, and it has long been the family custom to celebrate both birthdays July 4 with a family reunion. This was not possible this year so the celebration will take place later in the summer in Ohio.

While the Donaheys are recent additions to the senatorial circle, they have been popular and their interesting family of young people has many friends in Washington's junior set. They have the largest family of children in the Senate—ten in all—and there also are eleven grandchildren.

All their children except two are married. Vic, jr., is a student in law at the University of Ohio, and a daughter, Marion, is a teacher at the Marjorie Webster School for Girls.

Word comes from Paris that Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Beaver Strassburger, winter residents of Washington and Philadelphia, are entertaining lavishly in the French capital. Washington remembers them pleasantly and especially will recall the historic luncheon Mr. Strassburger gave at the start of the World War when he rallied prominent folk from all parts of the country in Washington to aid preparedness in this country.

After America entered the war Mr. Strassburger served as a special agent of the Bureau of Naval Intelligence and had many exciting experiences.

Associate Justice James McReynolds, of the United States Supreme Court, now on vacation, tells a story illustrating amusing features of legal repartee relating to his earlier law career when he was a prosecuting attorney.

Justice McReynolds was co-prosecutor in a case where a physician was called by the defense to testify. The physician's testimony ran through most of one day, and when he was recalled on the following morning for cross-examination, he announced that he wished to make some preliminary remarks.

"What do you wish to say?" inquired the other prosecutor.

"I wish to correct some mistakes in my testimony of yesterday," said the doctor.

"It is a fact, isn't it doctor, that many of your mistakes are buried under ground?" said the prosecutor ironically.

"Possibly," retorted the physician. "But, while we are on the subject, I wish to state that I have often suspected, sir, that many of your mistakes were hanged 10 feet above."

Gov. Alf Landon, Republican nominee for the Presidency, has one taste in common with many Presidents of the United States. That is his liking for detective and mystery stories.

President Woodrow Wilson was one of the most ardent of Presidential readers of such literature and President Roosevelt is not far behind him. President Harding sometimes read two detective stories in an evening when on a vacation and even Chief Justice Taft, both as President and jurist, enjoyed his detective story weekly.

The late Rear Admiral William A. Moffet, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department, always took detective stories with him on his flights.

President Wilson had a great liking for the detective stories which had Washington as a background. Therefore he was devoted to the mysteries written by the late Natalie Sumner Lincoln, noted fiction writer and editor of the Daughters of the American Revolution magazine. Whenever Miss Lincoln appeared at a White House social function she was certain to be asked by Ike Hoover or some member of the staff, when her new book was expected to appear. President Wilson once stopped her in the line to talk about one of her stories he was reading.

Business Women Have Right To Call Halt on Hackneyed Charge They Are 'Emotional'

By Malvina Lindsay.
Woman's Page Editor.

IT IS BECOMING so trite as to be tiresome—all this talk about women's emotionalism in business.

• • • •

Dr. John R. Watson, behaviorist, is the latest savant to warn women that "more failures in business come from lack of control of the emotions than from lack of intellect. At the same time, writers of an article in the current Independent Woman, entitled, "Deliver Me From a Woman Boss," make the point that too much emotionalism is one of the greatest handicaps of the woman executive.

• • • •

Certainly women are too emotional in business. But so are men. It's about an even toss-up as to which can act the most like spoiled brats about an office. It may be that a man doesn't cry or pout when things don't go to suit him, but he can stage a temper tantrum, or "hit the ceiling" or "cuss" and glower until all his associates long for a storm cellar.

ALMOST ANY SECRETARY can testify that handling a boss is to a large extent a matter of catering to a man's emotionalism. Like a wife, she must be a mind reader and an expert tight rope walker. She must sense moods, symptoms of indigestion and morning hangovers; she must be omnipresent, omniscient, and with it all properly humble.

• • • •

When if ever do women in offices—for all their "emotionalism"—get consideration from men in the matter of being "managed." An occasional self-confessed feminine genius may get away with being a prima donna. But in most business concerns much of the traditional feminine - masculine relationship from the home carries over. Men must be handled with gloves; they must have their fur stroked the right way; they must have their self-esteem fed; they must be influenced by devious methods and infinite tact.

• • • •

For the pot to call the kettle black, of course, does not help the pot. It is only that the business woman's emotionalism is being a bit overdone. There are other charges against women in business that can be made more fairly—and some of these are made by the authors of the Independent Woman article.

IT MAY LOGICALLY be said that women in business are too fussy and too picayunish about detail; that they lack self-confidence and decision; that they are inclined to whining and the martyr complex; that they often yield to petty personal jealousy; that they are sometimes cheaply personal in their business relationships.

• • • •

But to dump the charge of emotionalism wholly at their door is simply too much. It is the same as holding them responsible for crime, war and poverty. It is the world's great misfortune that it is still full of children masquerading as adults. Rarely does one meet a truly mature person—man or woman. Business offices are full of emotional morons of both sexes.

• • • •

Perhaps in time everybody will grow up. Business women, since they must work so largely with other people, are under a particular obligation to do so. But they have a right to demand that their men associates also try to leave the tactics of the nursery behind.

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"MY LIFE is hectic! But I think it's rather sweet, too . . . I feel so necessary, and I like that feeling." The lady who told us that naturally makes a pleasant home . . . she couldn't help it with that attitude.

The living room looks a bit battered, of course, between two big boys and one little one, to say nothing of a couple of puppies. But it's attractive in a hardy way. The rug is a good Axminster in ever so many different colors, but the general effect is rather tan. The walls are in yellow—a washable fabric wall covering that is very practical indeed. The glass curtains are yellow, too, and the draperies are in brown in a rough nubby cotton weave material. The upholstered furniture was the real problem . . . originally it was upholstered in taupe mohair, which certainly was the most practical thing in the world—for a room like this. But it was so drab looking! She settled the issue with slip covers of just as durable a fabric, but much prettier—a flat weave printed mohair that wouldn't fade or shrink. For the sofa, she got printed green and for one two of the easy chairs a printed coral color . . . then a plain green for another chair. The slip covers were carefully made to fit trimly without wrinkles, and so they really looked very tailored like upholstery. Yet she had the extra practicality of covers that came off for cleaning.

Her dining room has the same hearty sort of charm. It's nothing distinctive especially — just very homey and colorful. It's across the hall from the living room, and so quite separate . . . she's used white washable fabric wall covering here with a little green sprig of a design in it. She's painted the woodwork green, too, and made white dotted Swiss curtains for the windows, with bright red chintz draperies. The same red is used for the chair seats, and the rug is a hooked oval in grays, mostly with a touch of red and green . . . her furniture is maple.

Extra Meals Recommended For Hot Days

Doctor Lays Lost Appetite, Patience and Good Humor to Hunger.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., July 10 (AP).—Add two more meals to your daily dining routine and be rid of that tired feeling.

That is the recommendation of Dr. William D. Sansum, dietetics authority for many screen stars. What this country needs, the doctor declared, is five meals a day.

If you've lost your appetite, your patience and your good humor, you're hungry, he insisted.

"It is obvious we have the wrong system even in our eating of three meals," says Dr. Sansum. "Most of the world's work is done in the morning. We need the fullest energy, as provided by our food, at that time, yet we reserve the largest of the day for dinner time, in the evening, just before we go to bed."

Blood sugar is the "carburetor" of the human body, said Dr. Sansum.

"When we wake in the morning," he explained, "the sugar content of the blood is about a tenth of 1 per cent. After we eat breakfast the content rises to about 0.15 of 1 per cent.

"It is from this sugar we derive our energy, our ability to act and think intelligently. When the sugar rating is 0.15 of 1 per cent we have, individually, maximum efficiency. Many office workers do without breakfast, or at least a suitable one. By the time 10:30 arrives the blood sugar content is down to about 0.08 of 1 per cent—a point at which it is impossible to function, either mentally or physically, satisfactorily."

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

New Emulsified Cleansing Cream Nourishes the Skin.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.)

DRY SKINS require a thoroughly emulsified cleansing cream. There is one which may be used not only for cleansing a dry skin but also as a nourishing cream. It is exquisitely fine in texture and when you run your fingers through the cream it is so full of fine oil that it leaves a surface as shiny as glass. It is not what I would call a perfumed cream, but when you open the jar you exclaim: "My, but that smells good!" The scent is a little bit like almond.

This cream can be used as a nourishing cream if you wash your face with either a cleansing liquid or a soap. I found that it didn't interfere in the slightest with other cosmetics. It costs what the late Bert Williams said that Eve cost Adam—"just one bone." But you can expect a lot for that in this shiny black jar with the name of a well-established manufacturer upon it.

Some women like about seven jars of cold cream on their dressing table when they take a facial. If you are not one of these, try this as a two-purpose cream and see if you don't think it a find.

Milk in Quick Breads.

In baking it is well to remember that milk is the most desirable liquid to use in quick breads, cake and cookies, because of flavor, texture and food value. Whole milk, skimmed milk or powdered or evaporated milk diluted to the proper consistency, gives practically the same results, except for variations in food value.

Care Is Urged In Entertaining At Club Party

Hostess, Guests Should Show Consideration for Others.

By Margaret Wallace.

AT THIS SEASON of the year the country clubs play an important part in the social life of Washington.

In Washington it is considered good form to use city or country clubs for entertaining. The same conventions should prevail at such club entertainments as at a private home. The well-bred host and guests will remember, however, that they have not the privilege of the whole club unless that is arranged in advance. They should give the same consideration to other hosts and guests as they would give to their neighbors at their own home. No party should infringe on the comfort and pleasure of other parties at a club.

It is not permissible to join another party at the club without a special invitation. The guest who goes alone to a club should not feel privileged to join other guests unless especially invited any more than he would go to the house of his neighbor for dinner or an entertainment without being invited.

Query—I have a young girl guest and wish to take her to a club for which I have only a guest card myself. The person who gave me the guest card is not in town. Do you think I could give a party at the club for my guest?

Answer—It depends upon the rules of the club, and the meaning of your guest card. If the card gives you privilege to entertain at the club it would be proper to give a party there. It would be wise to ask those in charge of the club what use you can properly make of your guest card.

Query—When two women lunch together who pays the bill?

Answer—This question is usually arranged by the women themselves. If one of the women invites the other woman to be her guest of course the woman who issues the invitation pays the bill. Many women lunch together and each pays her own bill. This is especially true of business and professional women or young girls who do not have large incomes.

Query—Should a man always ask permission to introduce another man to a woman.

Answer—It is usual. But at a private dance or party or in business this formality is often dispensed with.

Query—I often go to a country club with my brother. We are strangers in Washington and were admitted to the club through a friend who is not in Washington at present. My brother dances with the girls whether he knows them or not, but will not allow me to dance with any of the young men unless I have been introduced to them.

Answer—If the dance is just a general one at the club your brother is right. It would be easy for the young men to meet your brother, who in turn could introduce them to you. After you have met a few they will introduce you to other young men. If the parties you attend are given by some special host or hostess of course it is proper to dance with any of the other guests whether they have been introduced or not.

Cool and Uncluttered—Yet Smart

This smart frock of "organet," a fine mesh, has everything to make it an ideal midsummer selection. It is black over a green slip, splashed with bay flowers, and trimmed with frosty green glass buttons. Note the simplicity of the styling and the absence of unnecessary touches which wilt when exposed to the summer sun. The hat is green straw matching the buttons and slip—the shoes are black.

Simple Frocks Best to Combat Heat

Porous Material in Wide Range of Colors Suitable.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

HOW TO LOOK wilt-proof when the thermometer soars "hundred-wards" is a serious problem for Washington women. It is disconcerting to start out in the morning with a dashing freshness and at the end of the day, or perhaps in just several hours, have that wilted, jaded air.

If your attire is chosen wisely you can relax, and this, in itself, is a grand beginning in this little game of cheating the sun and humidity. Simple frocks of good line are the best choice; then you don't have to worry about continually adjusting scarfs, removable collars and cuffs, and "perking up" other really unnecessary touches which have been added for pictorial effect. Lingerie trimmings lend a delightful feminine summery atmosphere to a dark frock, but when called into all-day service, they sometimes wilt under the strain.

Porous materials which permit of a continuous circulation of air are the best choice to combat Washington heat. There are a number of new materials on the market boasting of this important ventilating and "air-conditioning" quality. Fabrics of this type are almost imperative when dark colors are chosen on forrid summer days. Black has become a "must" in the wardrobe this season, and in spite of the traditional idea that it is a warm color, one can be literally as cool as a mint julep if the material is sheer and porous and the frock is not weighted down with a lot of unnecessary "doodads."

White, for that wanted frosted look, continues to dominate the summer style scene. The illusion of coolness is a "natural" with pristine white. Psychologically, it is perhaps the best summer apparel medium for both men and women. But here again the material, whether silk or cotton, should be cool as well as look cool—and launder like the proverbial handkerchief. In wearing white, however, one should be sure that it is always fresh appearing, as there is nothing worse than white which is soiled and wrinkled. With the modernized wrinkle-resistant materials, if one shops wisely, there is absolutely no excuse for that "mussed-up" appearance.

To top your cool frock a wide-brimmed hat of straw or any of the numerous materials in the smart millinery mode, has almost the effect of carrying a parasol; without the bother. Large hats were never as popular and diverse in styling as they are this season—and because of the crown treatment practically every woman, whether tall or short, slim or not so slim, can wear a wide-brimmed chapeau.

Regardless of the weather, the majority of women feel that gloves are an integral part of the costume. For a dark ensemble, white gloves are smart and summery—for a white or pastel costume, they are ideal complements. It is a good idea to "carry a spare" when out for the day, as white gloves have a way of not staying that way for any great length of time. Fabric gloves in just about a thousand and one varieties are available this season; the string and hand-crocheted are correct and the epitome of coolness.

In the matter of shoes, white, of course, look the coolest. To insure a continual appearance of freshness they should be cleaned daily. Dark shoes are smartest with dark frocks and if styled for coolness, they are just as comfortable as light bootery. Sandals are synonymous with summer footwear, although pumps and even oxford ties which are "ventilated" with perforations can be as cool as a breeze. Mesh hose is being shown by a number of the Washington shops—it is cool, smart and wears like iron; all of the standard and high fashion shades are available.

How to Look Cool.

Choose simple frocks.
Avoid "doo-dads."
Keep accessories fresh.
Carry spare gloves and handkerchiefs.
White shoes should be spotless.
Don't wear materials that wrinkle easily.
Mesh hose are cool and durable.
Dark frocks should be porous.
White costumes lend an illusion of coolness.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

CHAPTER 30.

RUTH REMAINED SILENT. As a matter of fact her own view of Philip Trefane had altered for the worse. Also he had had a good deal of money from her. More than once, since that painful little scene with Iris, she had wondered wearily whether the money she had given so willingly to the wife had not really been for the husband. There had been a look on Philip's face when he had come back—an eager, expectant look—and she had caught an imperceptible nod on the part of the woman to whom she had just given a check for a thousand pounds. She hated to remember that look, that slight nod. And she hated them the more because Iris had said plainly that Philip knew nothing of that big debt of hers.

He got up. "I won't stay any longer now," he was telling himself that she looked tired, and his love for her had in it a rare, because a most selfless, quality.

He took both her hands in his, and looked down into her face. "We're still friends, Ruth?"

"We'll always be friends," she said firmly.

A Strange Dream.

He left her, then, and she did not follow him to the door.

She made her way up to her room, and walking across to a window, watched the ungainly figure walking toward the lane which led to the manor house. She felt bewildered, uncertain, yet, on the whole, happier than she had been before he had spoken to her. There came back to her out of the past an old fashioned lady who had said of some man and some girl, "Has he spoken yet?" She had thought it such a funny expression. But she understood it now. Lord John had spoken to her, and with words which would remain imprinted on her heart.

She told herself that she would almost certainly say yes to that quiet, and yet passionate appeal. In a sense she knew very little of life, but she had learned enough to know how rare a man was this man, and how rarer still is the kind of love he had offered her. Something had happened, though she had no idea what it was, which had in a certain degree spoiled what she thought was to be a perfect partnership with Philip Trefane. Her first warm liking had faded. She could not but see that he was almost terribly fond not so much of money, but of what money can buy in the way of luxury and what he thought pleasure. She even wondered uneasily what lay behind his having pressed on her this play which she thought contained so unsuitable a part for herself. She was ashamed of what after all might be an entirely baseless suspicion.

And then Ruth did a thing she had hardly ever done. She lay down on her bed and tried to go to sleep. For she felt infinitely weary, and as if she wanted to shut out from her mind all the problems which seemed now to assail her at once.

After a while she actually did go to sleep, and had a curious dream.

She heard herself say, "I will marry you, John, and I'll do my best to make you happy. But you musn't expect me to love you as you love me. In fact, I like you because you are more like a friend than a husband." She found herself in his arms, and she felt suddenly terrified, for he was holding her so tightly she could scarcely breathe. She would have done anything in the world to rush away and hide herself, and then all at once she gave a sobbing sigh of relief, for the face into which she was looking up changed—and instead of John Pendervil's face, it was the smooth, young, eager face of her old love, George Dwight.

Then she awoke, trembling, and bewildered.

Plaintively she longed to be back where she had been only this morning, when she had run about singing and happy in the great empty castle, and filled with a sense of peace.

There fell on her ears the distant sound of the front door bell.

She went downstairs and took the note brought by one of the marvellous footmen. It contained an invitation to dinner, and she was asked to give a verbal answer. Though she shrank from seeing John Pendervil again so soon, she said that yes, she would come.

The man smiled broadly as he pocketed her half-crown. Miss Starling was a generous young lady and no mistake, very different from that proud madam, Mrs. Trefane, who bestowed a mean little gratuity as if she were throwing a bone to a dog.

Ruth thoroughly enjoyed the evening, to which she had looked forward with something like nervous dread. Lady Cicester amused both her son and her visitor with lively recollections of Queen Victoria.

She had spend a not unhappy year as maid of honor, and had carried away many memories to which she did not often allude.

Ruth was deeply interested to hear her say one thing. This was: "Don't believe much of what you hear and nothing of what you read concerning the old queen. She was a very shrewd, clever woman, my dear, and always knew exactly what she wanted. Partly because she was queen, but far more because she was a clever, determined woman, she generally got what she wanted. She wanted me to marry the man I did marry, and not a man I then wanted to marry. She did more. She gave me some very good advice, and though I didn't mean to take it, then, I profited by it."

Talks With Lord John.

When after a while the two were left together, Lord John had gone back, it seemed effortlessly, to his old ways. The first thing he said was this: "I have read that play with care, and what's more, I walked to the postoffice and got a call through to London. That play has been knocking about for a long time, and it will have to be radically altered before the censor will allow it to be played. It would not do you the slightest good, either with the public or the press, to take that part. I therefore advise you strongly to turn it down. And there's another thing I feel I must tell you. Whoever gets it will receive a large fee from the dramatist. All this being so, I'm afraid I must revise my good opinion of my cousin Philp. I feel extremely angry with him for trying to stick you with that play. The playwright in question is, however, finishing a play which might be the very thing for you, and I have already arranged that you shall see it before any one else."

His firm, determined, good-humored voice brought with it a most agreeable sense of comfort and reassurance. They talked a while and things got gradually back to what to herself she called their old happy ways. So much so that she felt quite sorry when he said: "I ordered my mother's car for you early. I think you ought to get back before there is any chance of the Trefanes having returned from London, and it might be best not to say anything about having come here to dinner. I should be sorry if Philip thought I had anything to do with your turning down that play. However, you're the best judge there of what you had better do and say about it."

When Ruth saw the Trefanes again they brought the news that Helen Bates had been to see an old schoolfellow in London, and was going to stay on with her for a time.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Young Married Woman, Newcomer Here From Florida, Asks Advice on How to Meet Kindred Spirits.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Two months ago my husband and I moved here from Miami, Fla., for my husband to accept a Government position. I am very eager to get acquainted with some young married women. Not knowing anyone in Washington and not being employed, I find it rather difficult. We have joined a church and I have met some young people that way but they are all employed or attending school.

• • • • •

I would like to attend classes of almost any kind, such as tap dancing, child psychology, practical nursing, homemaking, life saving, etc., if not too expensive. I went to the Y. W. C. A. but they do not have much to offer during the summer.

• • • •

I am eligible to join the D. A. R. and Eastern Star, but I have wondered if there are young women in these organizations and also what the fees are. I have had a stenographic course and office experience so I could probably find employment, but my husband and I both prefer that I find some other way of spending my leisure time. I like sports, bridge and educational studies with a practical trend.

• • • •

I know there are many lovely young women in Washington, but I just have not had a chance to meet them. I would be so grateful for any suggestion you could give me for solving my problems.. Sincerely,

MRS. G. W. M.

Some Suggestions.

DEAR MRS. G. W. M. For full information about the sort of women you would contact as a member of the District of Columbia Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star inquire of Mrs. Louise E. Kreglow, 1505 Kalmia road, GEorgia 6446. Mrs. Kreglow is grand matron of the local chapter and will be glad to talk to you, and will tell you what the membership fees are.

Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, CLeveland 6119, State regent of the D. A. R. for the District of Columbia, will explain the program of the D. A. R. to you, tell you about the likelihood of making social contacts with young women through becoming a member, and acquaint you with the fees.

• • • •

Miss Beth Moore, club news editor of this newspaper, suggests you may be eligible for membership in the Woman's City Club, or the American Association of University Women. By calling Miss Moore, NAtional 4200, Branch 335, you may learn the names of the proper officials to contact in submitting your candidacy for membership.

• • • •

As for adult study classes, Miss Maude E. Aiton, administrative principal of adult education in the District of Columbia public school system, will probably prove your best adviser. Miss Aiton's office is at the Webster School, Tenth and H streets northwest, and she may be reached by telephoning NAtional 6000 and asking for her office. She tells me several evening discussion groups will be organized a little later in the summer, one of which will be concerned with child psychology. You may need to go to a dancing academy for tap dancing instruction, and surely life-saving classes are held at the Y. W. C. A.

• • • •

Community Center recreational and educational projects conducted under the auspices of the local public school administration may possibly provide you some worthwhile social contacts. You can inform yourself on this program by telephoning NAtional 6000 and asking to be connected with Community Center headquarters. One correspondent, whose letter was published in this column July 1 told of having solved her problem of loneliness by "wandering over one night to a Community Center," where, according to her story, she "met some charming people with whom I formed a private class for advanced (bridge) instruction and then graduated into the duplicate bridge stratum. I now can have enjoyable amusement every night in the week if I so desire," she testified. Perhaps you too, can find friends through the Community Center.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's Health Talk

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The bringing of new life into the world is nature's dominant urge. Plants produce seeds which in turn, under favorable conditions, grow into the likeness and size of the parent. Vegetation springs up everywhere, varying with soil and climatic conditions. A solitary, stately pine on the sheer granite wall of a deep canyon typifies the struggle for survival.

But all in life is not "beer and skittles," and were it not attended with effort and work the race would degenerate. Whatever is worth while demands labor and sacrifice. Sometimes comfort must be surrendered and suffering endured.

Pregnancy is a perfectly safe, normal experience that need not carry with it fear of the outcome or forebodings for the future. It is a period in which life is developing, the mother supplying those nutritive elements that are undergoing transformation into bone and muscle, bood and vital organs. A child is being prepared for entrance upon a new and strange adventure.

Given a mother in sound health, with good, clean blood, who will observe the rules of hygiene and accept the benefits of prenatal care, a healthy baby may be expected. We cannot, however, follow blindly the pathway of indifference, as the strain of pregnancy may be too great to be borne by a mother's constitution. A real burden is placed upon heart, kidneys, liver and nervous system, and these structures, as well as the endocrine glands, may manifest signs of overload.

Blood Pressure.

It sometimes happens that a prospective mother who is seemingly well may note signs of swelling in various parts of the body, blurred vision, or bright spots before the eyes. On examination the blood pressure may be found to be somewhat increased and the urine to contain albumin. This presents an abnormal situation, but when it does appear prompt action and the best medical skill are demanded.

The way to prevent complications is to make certain that the patient consults a competent medical adviser just as soon as pregnancy is recognized. The beneficent role of the physician is exercised to a far more important degree in caring for the mother during the months of gestation than at the hour of birth. Constant supervision will avoid possible pitfalls.

The function of the kidneys particularly will need to be carefully evaluated. A woman who has suffered an inflammatory disease of these organs at some earlier date may go through pregnancy with perfect ease. On the other hand, there is a tendency to some degree of involvement in about one out of four such cases. Conscientious watching, however, will disclose the earliest sign of failure and permit the application of proper relief procedures.

Not more than one or two cases of eclampsia (convulsions) will be observed in a thousand pregnancies. While this is not a high percentage, yet the condition is severe enough when it develops to call for heroic action. The chief thing is to detect the first minor signs, long before the seizures are evident. This state of affairs—if and when it occurs—usually comes on in the last three months of pregnancy, sometimes but a week or two prior to delivery. Symptoms that may be noted include a sudden gain in weight, swelling of the body—face, eyelids, hands, feet, etc.—rise of blood pressure, albumin in the urine and disturbance of vision. Should the sight fail suddenly and the patient become so drowsy that she is difficult to arouse, an emergency presents itself.

Constant Supervision.

It is probably not too much to say that the lives of very few mothers would be lost from these unusual and untoward manifestations of toxemia could they be under the constant supervision of an alert physician. But he must not be called upon to bear the entire load of responsibility. As a part of her training every prospective mother should familiarize herself with the rules of diet, exercise, rest, play and recreation, the use of baths, the care of the digestive tract and the need for fluids.

Lowengrub Sentenced as Embezzler

Was Arrested After His Firm's Secretary Killed Herself.

Youth Gets 6 Months to Year in Extortions From Canon.

Irving Lowengrub, president of the Lowengrub Investment Co., arrested as the result of a letter sent to United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett by Mrs. Leona Epstein, secretary of the company, just before she committed suicide, yesterday pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzlement in District Court. He was sentenced to serve from 1 year to 15 months.

Others sentenced by the court yesterday were Horace W. Richardson, 21, who pleaded guilty to extortion, and Benjamin M. Barker, a former paying and receiving teller of the Second National Bank, who pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzling $3,100. Barker was placed on probation for a period from 1 to 2 years. Richardson was sentenced to serve from six months to a year and a day.

Lowengrub, who had first pleaded not guilty, appeared yesterday with his attorneys, Alvin L. Newmyer and Lewis Shapiro, who entered a plea of guilty to embezzlement of $2,800 from Dr. C. E. Ferguson, of 1414 Delafield street northwest, who claimed he gave Lowengrub the money to purchase securities and that he failed to get either the securities or his money.

Took Life By Gas.

Mrs. Epstein's letter was received last winter by Col. Garnett after she had taken her life by gas, which exploded from some undetermined cause and tore out the side of the apartment in the 3000 block of Rodman street in which she lived. Her death was pronounced a suicide by the coroner.

Richardson pleaded guilty to seven charges of extorting money from the Rev. Raymond L. Wolven, canon of the Washington Cathedral. In passing sentence, Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue pointed out that the youth had no prior record and that he had saved the time of the court by his guilty plea. He was sentenced on each of the seven counts, sentence to run concurrently.

In making his decision to place Barker, 28, on probation, Justice O'Donoghue pointed out he was getting only $26 a week on which he was required to support himself, his wife, and his infant daughter and in addition was compelled to outfit himself in such fashion as would befit his position in the bank.

Paid Medical Expenses.

Justice O'Donoghue also took into consideration the fact that complete restitution of the money had been made to the company that had bonded Barker. He also stressed the fact that he had no prior record, and that a portion of the money he took had been used to pay medical and hospital expenses.

In extending leniency, Justice O'Donoghue told Barker, who was represented by Attorney Julian Richards, that he had a position of trust in which he was frequently called upon to handle hundreds of thousands of dollars a week. He explained his action in granting probation was not intended to give the idea that others in positions of trust could take their "corporation's money" and escape punishment.

Blair Road Land Verdict Approved

The District Commissioners yesterday approved the verdict of a jury in the condemnation of land for the widening of Blair road northwest from a point south of Peabody street to Underwood street.

The amount allowed by the jury for damages was $51,986.50, with court costs of $1,603.08, making a total of $53,589.58.

Offsetting this, however, the jury assessed property owners $27,483 in benefits, so that the widening actually will cost the District only $26,106.58.

The amount awarded by the jury on second commercial property on the east side of Blair road, the report showed, ranged from 40 cents to $1 a square foot.

Local Man Named Motor Agency Aid

C. E. Calvert, of Washington, has been appointed one of six district supervisors of field service of the Bureau of Motor Carriers, it was announced yesterday.

Calvert, member of the trucking firm of Calvert & Pope of this city, lives at 6530 Fourth street northwest. He has been in Washington for 17 years.

Calvert was appointed one of the supervisors for District No. 5. Others whose appointments were also announced yesterday are: C. F. Joyner, jr., C. M. Mark and H. P. Raymond, of Virginia, and N. C. Mims and C. E. Turnbull, of North Carolina.

Firm Sued for $75,000 In Child Traffic Injury

Damages of $75,000 were asked of the Cudahy Packing Co. in a suit filed in District Court yesterday by Clarke J. Risler, 832 Rittenhouse street northwest, who charged that his 9-year-old son, Robert, is about to lose his sight as a result of being struck by one of the company's trucks March 14, 1935.

The father, through Attorney Norman E. Sill, declared his son was struck at the intersection of Twenty-sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

D. C. Prettiest —and Hottest, Poles Declare

30 Boy and Girl Scouts Go Sightseeing in Spite of Heat.

"Your Capital is the most beautiful city we've ever seen—and the hottest."

In these unqualified terms 30 Boy and Girl Scouts of Poland summed up their opinion of Washington after a day of sightseeing yesterday.

Despite the heat the young men and women made the round of public buildings and other points of interest according to schedule. The—in the late afternoon they met at the Polish Embassy to rest and enjoy refreshments in the large, cool rooms there. They were entertained by Edward Kulikowski, secretary of the embassy.

"We've enjoyed the visit here very much," said Jack Wnek, journalist of the party—he is editor of the Polish Scout publication.

"We have never seen so many wide streets. We never saw so many big, new buildings as those on your Constitution avenue. We're sorry we can't stay longer."

The visit in the Capital ends this morning, when the party pushes west en route to Pittsburgh. Then they'll go to Cleveland, and eventually to Chicago.

Coming across the Atlantic on the Polish liner Pilsudski, the Scouts, led by Eugene Sikorski, scoutmaster, and Iza Kaniowska, leader of the Girl Scouts, arrived in New York last Sunday to begin a good will tour.

While in America they will visit Boy and Girl Scouts here, and they are making stops in several cities that have numbers of Polish citizens.

In addition to their sightseeing yesterday, the visitors went to headquarters of the Boy and Girl Scouts to pay their respects.

"We are really here in behalf of the 140,000 Boy Scouts and the 60,000 Girl Scouts in Poland, and ours is a courtesy visit to the Scouts in America," said Scoutmaster Sikorski.

Zioncheck Friend Granted Leniency

Clarence J. Holt, 34, real estate operator, who started a one-man campaign to free Representative Marion A. Zioncheck from Gallinger Hospital, was given a suspended sentence of $20 or 20 days in jail for defacing public property in Police Court yesterday.

Holt painted "Free Zioncheck" on the walls of Gallinger Hospital several weeks ago while Zioncheck was an inmate undergoing mental observation treatment.

When arraigned before Judge Walter Casey earlier this week, Holt pleaded guilty and sentence was withheld to permit him to pay restitution of $19.50 for repainting the wall. After payment was made by Holt, Casey announced the suspended sentence.

La Roe Urges Social Worker At Reformatory

Washington Churches Told 1,400 Men at Lorton Need Their Help.

Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman of the District Parole Board, has suggested to the Washington Federation of Churches that it pay for a trained social worker to be employed at Lorton Reformatory, it was learned last night.

La Roe, who is also chairman of the committee on civic affairs of the Federation, has informed the committee that the 1,400 men confined in the reformatory do not have a social or religious worker upon whom they can rely for aid in their personal problems and in religious matters.

The parole board chairman said: "These men have no real friend within the reformatory except as they are helped by the officials. They leave the reformatory without even a friendly handclasp. Here is a great opportunity for the Christian Churches of Washington."

Although praising the general administration of the reformatory, La Roe said the lack of a trained social worker is a real defect.

The parole board, it was learned, may ask the District Commissioners to include a sum in the budget for this purpose, but if this is not approved the Federation of Churches is giving consideration to financing it through either personal contributions or through the budget of the Federation.

Potomac Favored For Control Study

In a progress report made public yesterday, the National Resources Committee against suggested that a Potomac River conservation district be set up to study methods of river control.

The report, which was submitted to President Roosevelt, also urged that the approximately 175,000 separate Federal, State and local governments co-ordinate their efforts to avoid duplication.

The Potomac River conservation district would act as a sort of demonstration unit for methods of flood and water use.

4,000 to Attend Second Division Reunion Here

Dedication of Memorial to Feature 3-Day Event Next Week.

Officials of the Second Division Association, headed by Earnest S. Colling, representing Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, wartime commander of the Second Division, A. E. F., and Arthur Counihan, assistant secretary of the association, met at the Wardman Park Hotel last night to complete plans for the division's eighteenth annual reunion here July 16-18.

More than 3,000 members of the division have already said that they would attend the reunion. Late acceptances are expected to bring the total to about 4,000.

The three-day reunion program will be featured by the dedication of the recently completed Second Division memorial on the Ellipse Saturday afternoon. The principal speaker at the dedication, which will be broadcast over a nation-wide hookup, will be Maj. Gen. Harbord.

Present at the dedication will be detachments from every branch of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. It is planned to have Army planes dip over the memorial in a flying salute to the 4,200 war dead of the Second Division.

The new memorial on the Ellipse, a flaming sword set in an open arch, represents the stand taken by the Second Division when they stopped the Germans at Belleau Wood in June, 1918, when the German army had broken through the French and had almost an open road to Paris. James E. Fraser was the sculptor of the memorial, and John Russell Pope the architect.

An informal program will occupy Thursday, the first day of the reunion. Music will be furnished by the Marine Band Orchestra.

The program for Friday includes the placing of a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier by an enlisted man yet to be chosen. The reunion ball will be held at the Willard Hotel Friday night.

The business meeting will be held Saturday morning, and, after the memorial dedication in the afternoon, the reunion will close with a dinner at the Willard Saturday night.

Marine Air Base Adviser Is Named

Expansion of the Bureau of Air Commerce's work in the seaplane base field was indicated yesterday with the announcement by Eugene L. Vidal, director of the bureau, of the appointment of Donald D. Cooke, of New York City, as the bureau's marine air terminal adviser.

In his new post, Cooke will be responsible for the approval of seaplane base projects undertaken with WPA allotments and is to assist cities in the technical preparation of these projects.

Born in Paterson, N. J., Cooke served in the Navy during the war, attaining the rank of lieutenant, junior grade. A trained mechanical engineer, he was associated for a number of years with a locomotive manufacturing company. He was formerly employed by the docks department of New York City in connection with the proposed establishment of seaplane bases in New York harbor.

Heat Breaks Pride of Carpenter Who Refused Hospital Charity

William Poulson's pride was finally broken by the heat yesterday.

Truck drivers found the 74-year-old carpenter lying semi-conscious on the dishevelled bed of his one-room shack on the banks of the Potomac at 6 S street southwest. He no longer had strength to resist them as they took him to Gallinger Hospital.

Doctors at the hospital gave him little chance to live last night. Congestive heart failure complicated by malnutrition and age was their official diagnosis.

Poulson had consistently refused to go to the hospital. Social workers, police and neighbors had tried for some time to persuade him, but he thought he could get along on his own.

Pride also kept him from accepting relief until two years ago when he almost starved to death. He has rich relatives in his native Virginia, but will neither take anything from them nor return to his home town, according to Raymond Hager and his wife, Emma, who live nearby at 6 S street southwest. He preferred the independence of his shack where he has lived for seven years, ever since he became too old to work.

Th Hagers were guarding his shack last night until police could come and collect his belongings. Behind him Poulson left a gold watch, a little dog, a couple of dollars in a tin box and a few utensils. He also owns a small boat which he will not part with, they said, for less than $250.

A brother-in-law, Staten F. Byrd, of Poulson, Va., was notified of the man's condition.

Estimate Call For D. C. Asks Budget Cuts

Keynote Is Sounded for Strict Economy in Administration.

Donovan Outlines Plan to Abolish Overtime Work for City.

Sounding a keynote of strict economy, the District Commissioners yesterday called upon department heads to submit their 1938 fiscal year estimates to the budget officer, Maj. Daniel W. Donovan, not later than August 1.

Action was taken upon the recommendation of Maj. Donovan, who in a report to the Commissioners called attention to the fiscal problem facing the District government.

"Due to the present state of District finances," he said, "the uncertainty of the amount of the Federal contribution for 1938, and the question as to whether or not the District must raise additional taxes, all of which of necessity have a material bearing on the District's budget for 1938, the Commissioners request department heads to exercise strict economy in submitting their budget recommendations for that year.

Lowest Figures.

"Particularly do the Commissioners ask that estimates for personal services and other items of operation and maintenance be held to the lowest possible figures, and that no increases for these purposes be requested except where justified by impelling reasons.

"Wherever it is possible without impairment of the public service to reduce estimates for operation and maintenance under 1937 appropriations for those purposes, such reductions should be made. Estimates for capital improvements must be justified by the test of immediate necessity."

Turning to the general move in the Federal and District services to eliminate overtime work, Maj. Donovan said:

"In those cases where departments are not observing 'standard hours of labor' there shall accompany the budget recommendations complete information showing present hours of labor and the number of additional employes and salaries required to establish such standard hours of labor."

Cites Thomas Letter.

Calling attention to a letter sent the Commissioners last April by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the subcommittee on District appropriations, Maj. Donovan instructed the institutions under the board of public welfare to submit three sets of estimates: (1) the usual requests; (2) a list of additional employes and salaries needed to observe standard working hours, and (3) a list of additional employes and salaries to comply with Senator Thomas' suggestion that the seven-day working week at several welfare institutions be eliminated.

The Commissioners will be compelled to draft their 1938 budget with a wide gap between anticipated revenue and expenditures because of the uncertainty of the Federal contribution.

This gap will be filled by Congress after the President reports the findings of his fiscal relations study.

Don't rush around or worry.

Avoid heavy foods, hot soups or rich pastries.

Opening Concert Leader Selected

Alfred Wallenstein, American violoncellist, who has in recent years been achieving an excellent reputation as conductor, will direct the 80 members of the Washington Summer Concerts Association in the opening program Sunday evening, July 19, at the Potomac Watergate. The organization is composed of Washington musicians who have banded themselves together in a co-operative effort to continue the outdoor concerts which proved so successful last summer.

Mr. Wallenstein announces for his first program the overturn to Wolf-Ferrari's one-act opera, "Il Segreto di Susanna," Bethoven's fifth symphony, Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Die Goetterdaemmerung," Sibelius' "Valse Triste," Dukas' "L'Apprenti Sorcier," and Tschaikovski's overture-fantasie, "Romeo and Juliet."

Mr. Wallenstein also will conduct the concerts Wednesday evening, July 22, and Friday evening, July 24. He will be followed by other guest conductors, who will direct three concerts each week throughout the summer. The series of 22 concerts will end September 6.

During the last four years, Wallenstein has been increasingly active as an orchestral director in broadcasting and also has made numerous appearances as guest conductor of established orchestras in several American cities.

Trying Helium Treatment for "Bends"

Navy Doctors Employ Helium In New Treatment for 'Bends'

J. A. Hawkins and C. W. Shilling Develop Method of Counteracting Sufferings of Divers Who Come Up Too Fast.

A new method of counteracting the "bends"—the acute pains suffered by underground and undersea workers when brought to surface too quickly—through the use of helium, has been developed by two Naval doctors attached to the Experimental Diving Unit at the Washington Navy Yard.

After more than two years of experimentation, and actual use of helium on 40 afflicted persons, the two doctors, James A. Hawkins and Charles W. Shilling, are convinced their discovery is of value and are preparing to publish an analysis of their methods and observations in a scientific journal.

"Bends," Dr. Hawkins explained yesterday, are caused by the blood's taking up a great deal of nitrogen from the high pressure air in which men are working in compressed air chambers. When the workers come into nomal air pressures, the nitrogen forms bubbles in their veins, causing the most excruciating pains and often resulting in permanent crippling or death.

The usual method of counteracting the "bends" is to place the sufferer in a compression chamber, reproducing the conditions under which he was working, and by gradually reducing the pressure to bring him up to normal. A diver who went 300 feet down into the sea and came up with the "bends" would be kept about 6 hours in the compression chamber.

Since the compression chamber reproduces air pressure conditions, additional nitrogen is taken into the blood and there is always the danger of having permanent traces left even after the man is brought out of the compression chamber. By administering helium, which is less soluble in blood than nitrogen, to the man with the "bends," Drs. Hawkins and Schelling have been able to eliminate nitrogen from the blood more rapidly, bringing the man out of the compression chamber sooner and with less pain.

A mixture of some inactive gas and oxygen that would counteract the effects of "bends" has been sought for many years. At one time German scientists used hydrogen, but gave it up as there was too great a danger of explosions.

Helium, Hawkins pointed out, might prove of value not only in treating persons already suffering from the "bends" but in prevention. By including a helium mask in the diving helmet and having the diver breathe some of the gas as he comes to the surface, men can be brought up more rapidly and with less risk.

15 States Enact Security Law, Speaker Says

40 Per Cent of Employes Eligible Are Protected, Campbell Avers.

Forty per cent of the employes for whom unemployment compensation provision is made in the social security act are now protected in the plans adopted by 15 States, Dr. Walter J. Campbell, of the information service of the Social Security Board, told members of the Washington Round Table yesterday noon. The luncheon meeting was at the University Club.

Dr. Campbell made the statement in reviewing progress the board has made since its organization in February.

He outlined the features of the act, and said every State and the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii already are benefiting from one or more provisions.

Old-age pensions, made possible for the States through Federal cooperation, are providing for more than 800,000 aged persons, he said, and cash grants for the blind and for dependent children, as well as for the aged, have totaled more than $25,000,000.

Dr. Campbell, who heads the educational unit of the information service, described the social security legislation as "the most significant ever taken by any government."

"It is an attempt," he said, "to work out an American plan to meet social hazards bearing down heavily on the people least able to take care of themselves."

One of these hazards, he pointed out, is the "permanent unemployment problem" resulting from our advanced state of mechanized industry. He predicted a stabilized population in America by 1950, which, he said, will mean "a larger proportion of folks who are older."

The age median in 15 years he believed would be 39.9 years.

35 Continue Play Despite Gaming Raid

Vice Squad Finds Entry Easy; Doors Open Due to Heat.

Alleged Gamblers Little Concerned; 7 to Get Hearing Today.

The heat yesterday made the raiding of an alleged gambling house in the first block of H street a simple affair for Vice Squad members and Deputy Marshal Clayton Gasque.

It was so hot in the basement used by the establishment, beneath a barber shop, that all the doors were opened to allow the air to circulate. Police walked in and announced that all were under arrest.

The players, 35 of them, were too warm to be bothered. They calmly played as members of the Vice Squad stationed outside came in to see why nothing happened.

Gasque described the place as the most arrogantly conducted establishment ever raided in Washington. "The gamblers," he said, "did not even stop playing cards after I served the warrant. The doors were wide open and we strolled in unchallenged."

Three patrol wagons were necessary to bring the 35 men to headquarters. Seven were booked for setting up a gaming table. The others were released as witnesses.

Those arrested were Joseph Corridon, 31, 1800 block of North Capitol street; Mortimer P. Williams, 67, 1400 block of Park road northwest; D. W. King, 37, first block of H street northwest; Howard W. Fowler, 41, 200 block of North Capitol street northwest; Allen H. Work, 47, 200 block of Twelfth place northeast; Samuel Shaffer, 45, 1200 block of Seventh street northwest, and Eugene Lewis, 38, 600 block of Morris street northeast.

All were released in $2,000 bond for a hearing before Commissioner Needham C. Turnage today at 10 a. m.

Several electric fans, telephones, a radio and a black jack table were confiscated by police. Sergt. George Deyoe led the vice squad.

Court Cites Firm In Fraud Charge

Justice Jesse C. Adkins, in District Court, yesterday ordered the Krystal Chemical Co., Inc., and its president, George Arone, to show cause why it should not be enjoined from making allegedly "false and fraudulent representations in the sale of its stock.

The action was taken at the request of the Securities and Exchange Commission, which asserted, in its complaint, that Arone falsely represented that the company owned a soap formula and that it was operating at a profit. The complaint also alleged that dividends were paid to investors out of capital funds, not from earnings.

Bruce Aitchison, representing the Exchange Commission, explained the filing of the complaint followed a resent SEC hearing.

A Mighty Film Play Staggers Palace Crowds

'San Francisco' Triumphs Upon Local Opening; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"SAN FRANCISCO." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel by Robert Hopkins, adapted to the screen by Anita Loos, co-starring Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald, with Spencer Tracy, Jack Holt, Jessie Ralph, Shirley Ross, Al Shean, Ted Healy, Charles Judels, Harold Huber, Vincent Barnett, Frank Mayo, Tom Dugan, Kenneth Harlan, Russell Simpson, Bert Roach and hundreds more. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke. Previewed Saturday, June 27.

Perhaps the most important thing is to make clear at the outset that "San Francisco," playing to standing-room crowds at the Palace, lays no claim to being an infallible historical document.

BELL.

It presents a fictional story of constant conflict between the lusty bravado of the Barbary Coast, at the height of its infancy, and the smug austerity of fashionable Knob Hill and was designed, in its pictorial form, solely to supply entertainment of a colorful and melodramatic nature.

This it does with practically 100 per cent efficiency, primarily as a result of W. S. Van Dyke's uncanny facility in directing large groups of players in scenes instinct with action and the vivid contrasts of political and social warfare.

The principal figures in the development of the variegated fable unfolded on the screen are "Blackie" Norton, the "big shot" resort keeper on the Barbary Coast, whose Paradise Cafe is the center of nocturnal revelry; Mary Blake, daughter of a Colorado clergyman, in San Francisco to essay the chill and impregnable heights of grand opera, and Father Mullins, presiding over a struggling settlement house on the "Coast." About these three is woven a melodramatic romance that moves with breezy tunefulness, high color and a rough-and-ready vigor, which strangely enough, seems to weld favorite arias from the grand operas—including almost a full act of Gounod's "Faust"—with the jangling tunes of the Barbary honky-tonks into a sound and logical symphony of a great city in the making.

Quake Supplies Climax.

The element of upper-crust aristocracy is injected into the picture by the effort of the influential scion of Knob Hill to salvage Mary from a life of questionable artistic usefulness at the Paradise and launch her upon a career worthy of her talents. This is a project that is interrupted by the horrendous disaster that overtook the city whose name the picture bears on April 18, 19 and 20 in the year 1906. The climacteric final reels of the film are devoted to an amazingly realistic reproduction of the ghastly catastrophe that reduced San Francisco to a blazing shambles and inspired the Phoenix-like rebirth of the city as it is known today.

In these earthquake and fire scenes there may be inaccuracies that will assert themselves boldly in the consciousness of those who went through those calamitous April days in 1906, but in the main the spectacle has been achieved with accuracy and tremendously moving dramatic effect by virtue of exhaustive research and painstaking productional effort.

"San Francisco" returns Clark Gable in the role of "Blackie" Norton, to the two-fisted sort of thing for which he seems especially well-equipped. The role is one that successfully contrives to conceal a fine nature under a superficial assumption of the sinister attributes of a rough, tough hombre. Into the protective keeping of this fighting "big shot" comes frightened and fragile Mary Blake, perfunctorily played, but superbly sung, by Jeanette MacDonald. It is greatly to Miss MacDonald's credit that she is able to make her rowdy songs of the "Coast" resort and the arias from "Faust" and "La Traviata" equally within the temper and the tempo of their respective scenes and environments.

Tracy a Surprise.

The surprise of the picture, however, is supplied by Spencer Tracy in the role of the Barbary Coast priest who exerts a steadying influence upon the lives of those who fall under his sympathetic and helpful ministrations. It is Tracy who lends the picture an emotion and spiritual tug that lifts it above the level of mere melodrama and places it among the most legitimately appealing of the season's major productions.

There are innumerable other roles that are played with care and proficiency by a cast of notable artists—Ted Healy supplying a needed comedy note in many scenes; Harold Huber personifying the crude fidelity of the professional bouncer, Kenneth Harlan, coming back to life as a political figure in 'Frisco's underworld; Al Shean, as an orchestra leader; Jack Holt, as the young millionaire from Knob Hill, and Jessie Ralph, as his rich mother, who came up from the washtubs of the waterfront, and so on and so on.

"San Francisco" is of such length and varied content that only a brief newsreel and cartoon comedy are presented as auxiliaries of a feature that reveals an unprecedented capacity for affording screen entertainment of the highest possible rank. It should run for weeks.

"WE WENT TO COLLEGE." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by George Oppenheimer and Finley Peter Dunne, jr. Adapted to the screen by Richard Maibaum and Maurice Rapf. Featuring Walter Abel, Hugh Herbert, Charles Butterworth, Una Merkel, Edith Atwater and Walter Catlett. Directed by Joseph Santley. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

Nostalgia and Hugh Herbert are a curious combination, but somehow in this heat quite effective.

"We went to College" is a silly picture about the absurd behavior of usually staid old grads on their return to dear old Alma Mater, come Homecoming Celebration. But it manages rather neatly to be very human at the same time that it is silly.

Glenn Harvey, Phil Talbot and Ellery Standish went to Sutter College together back in the 19-teens. Phil, the football hero, has become the second largest brick manufacturer in the country; Glenn is the principal drawback in his business, and Ellery has stayed at the college as a professor of economics. (Hugh Herbert is Ellery! And he quotes Adam Smith!)

Susan went to college, too, with all three of the boys, but mostly with Phil. However, when Phil didn't come back for her, she married Ellery.

The quartet, plus Phil's wife, and a million other old grads get together at Homecoming, and memories and sighs and songs and beer and that strange drink "the Glenn Harvey special" rear their dangerous heads, amidst a great many rounds of laughter.

Capable Comedy Cast.

A more than capable comedy cast takes care of the festivities that really succeed most of the time in not going too far and which several times are nicely sentimental.

Walter Abel, the lad with the eloquent hands, as Phil, and that grand, drawling Una Merkel, who gets prettier and prettier, as Susan, provide most of the plot (?). Una is delicious as a lady with a soul, longing for expression. Her Desdemona is priceless, though the best line in her brief struggle with Shakespeare is contributed by her burnt-cork Othello in a far south of the Mason-Dixon accent, as he gazes at his fair lady smothering in pillow feathers—"Not daid yet!"

Abel, adept at comedy or tragedy, has a field day, punctuating his lines with delicious voice quaverings.

Hugh Herbert is properly Hugh Herbert, although called Professor Ellery, with one exception—one very short and nice little serious speech, done nicely and seriously. Charlie Butterworth is also pleasantly himself even when, as a result of too much whisky without soda, he is far from being himself.

Edith Atwater is a pretty Mrs. Phil, and Walter Catlett is a Senator. The name of his State is not given for fear of libel.

More Bowes Amateurs.

On the stage, Maj. Bowes has sent another crop of amateurs—amateurs, whom he claims, are now star-amateurs, having earned their spurs. Well, purely amateur or stars or spur-earners or what, they seem to be getting a little too professional. The edge seems to be wearing off of the fun of greeting newcomers when newcomers are set in the usual vaudeville method of presentation and performance.

All are quite capable in their way, but the four acts which would stop most any show, are, in the order named:

The young "Believe It or Not" boy soprano, who sings the Italian street song from "Naughty Marietta," with as much sweetness and notes just as high as those of Miss Jeanette MacDonald. Young Johnny Powell, of Canada, who can tap with the best of them. Miss Pearl Robins, who taps on her toes. And the Eagle Harmonica Quintet.

There are also for good measure, 18-year-old Michael Cunningham, with a very promising voice, a 300-pound tenor from Oklahoma; Vivian Barlow, whose balcony scene a la Mae West, is quite a stunt; Marshall Rogers, who plays on musical glasses; Windy Jack, who plays on balloons and tire pumps; Nunny and Santa Ceroala, who dance, and the Dixie Trio.

An unusually interesting Fitzpatrick travelogue in color to St. Helena and Napoleon's last home; a Paramount Pictorial proving why champagne is expensive and that Mount Blanc is high, the newsreel and the spirited overture of Tin Pan Alley hits, conducted by Phil Lampkin with zest enough to indicate he didn't know it was hot outside, conclude the bill.

Metropolitan

"EARLY TO BED." Paramount picturization of a story by Lucien Littlefield and Chandler Sprague, adapted to the screen by Arthur Kober, co-starring Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland, with George Barbier, Robert McWade, Lucien Littlefield, Gail Patrick, Helen Flint, Arthur Hoyt, Billy Gilbert, Dorothy Christie, Brooks Benedict and June Gittleson. Directed by Norman McLeod. Reviewed Friday night.

Somnambulism and Charles Ruggles hold infinite potentialities for hilarious fun. Most of them are realized in "Early to Bed," now on view as chief feature of the engaging screen bill at the Metropolitan Theater.

One has only to hark back to "Three of a Kind," "The Pursuit of Happiness," "Ruggles of Red Gap," and the other gay charades in which they have jointly appeared to realize how perfectly the comic talents of Mr. Ruggles and Mary Boland dovetail into a perfect comedy design. It was obviously for the perpetuation of this happy coalition of ability to tickle the risibilities that the Messrs. Littlefield and Sprague thought up the lively narrative upon which a considerable succession of comedy situations are hung.

Mr. Ruggles and Miss Boland, it seems, have been sweethearts for something like 20 years, but Ruggles never has succeeded quite in plucking up the requisite fire to pop the flaming question. His delay has been prompted by a horrible affliction. Mr. Ruggles walked in his sleep.

Walks Into Trouble.

However, under the urge of a sizable bonus that bobs up in the offing, the glass-eye salesman marries the girl. Not, it should be said, until after he has landed a big order, lost it, landed it again and got himself mixed up in an intricate tangle of robbery, mystery and murder—all of which takes place while Mr. Ruggles is rambling about in his sleep! That will warn you of approximately what to expect!

Supporting the stars in this frolicsome comedy-melodrama are such noted funsters as George Barbier, Robert McWade, Lucien Littlefield—one of the authors of the tale—Gail Patrick, one of the cinema's authentic beauties; Dorothy Christie, another one; Sidney Blackmer, former husband of Lenore Ulric; timid little Arthur Hoyt, the screen's living Caspar Milquetoast, and the considerable number of others whose names appear in small type preceding these remarks.

A single-reel presenting the tuneful activities of Carl Hoff and his Orchestra, a one-reel comedy, "Shorty at the Seashore," starring one of the most sagacious of the acting chimpanzees, and the combined Paramount and Universal newsreels supplement a bill that is wholly in keeping with the irresponsible spirit of the season and a sweltering public's quest of light and thoughtless entertainment.

"LITTLE MISS NOBODY." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of "The Matron's Report," by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan, with screen play by Lou Breslow, Paul Burger and Edward Eliscu, starring Jane Withers, supported by Jane Darwell, Ralph Morgan, Sarah Haden, Harry Carey, Betty Jean Hainey, Thomas Jackson, Jed Prouty, Claudia Coleman, Donald Haines, Clarence H. Wilson and Lillian Harmer. Directed by John Blystone. Reviewed Friday night by Sally Stroud.

In "Bright Eyes," the Temple picture in which Jane Withers first found fame, she was too bad; in "Ginger," her initial starring venture, she was too goody-good. So now in "Little Miss Nobody" she is a bad little girl who really has a good heart. Everyone should be happy.

Living in an orphange, she is the ringleader of all mischief which breaks out. Some of her pranks are amusing; some; like the one where she steals turkeys for the Thanksgiving dinner do not quite bring the heart throb they were undoubtedly intended to. That is, unless one is the approximate age of Jane. Then there is a vicarious thrill.

The story is about how Mary, Jane's best friend, is almost adopted by the family of a most impossible boy. Jane switches identification items in the orphangage records and Mary is adopted by Jane's own father instead.

And so on and so on. Jane finally finds shelter with Harry Carey, reformed jailbird. He owns a pet shop, which is fun for Jane. Besides, she doesn't have to go to the reform school, to which she has been en route when she fortunately made friends with Carey.

Some Exciting Moments.

There are exciting moments when a blackmailing former acquaintance of Carey's attempts to rob the home of Jane's real father, gaining entry when Jane secretly went to visit Mary. They all lived in the same town, you know. And just when one begins to wonder if Ralph Morgan (the real father) will ever know that Jane, not Mary, is the real daughter, everything works out beautifully. Fadeout: Jane sobs "Father!" all over Morgan's nice waistcoat.

Jane Darwell, as matron of the orphanage, has a good role, though not so large as the same character in the original story. Sara Haden, as one of the assistants, has a difficult part, as she has to appear cold, unsympathetic, un-understanding. It is good to see the old trouper, Harry Carey. And Ralph Morgan is adequate. But it is Jane's show, and the kids will love her.

"Alpine Rendezvous" has some nice show scenes, which will make you grit your teeth in impotent envy. There is a Swiss fella who sings a medley of cowboy songs as they have never been sung before.

"Beware of Blonds" is a light bit about two youngsters who wreck each others cars and are subsequently cast as lovers in the college romance.

Metrotone news completes the bill.

How to Be Happy, Though Melting!

It still seems to us that the young lady kicking up her heels in the foreground has a little the best of it in this fight against the prevalent temperatures. After all, 300 pounds of ice can out-refrigerate two skimpy ice cream cones! These young crusaders against the mercurial excesses, by the way, are Marie Wilson and Carol Hughes, standing in the rear, and Ann Nagel, on the ice. They are Warner Brothers starlets and prompt the trite observation that it "isn't the heat, it's the nudidity," or something like that!

'White Angel' Provides Grim Drama of War

Florence Nightingale Is Heroine of Sterling Film at Earle.

"THE WHITE ANGEL." First National picturization of a screen play by Mordaunt Shairp, starring Kay Francis, with Ian Hunter, Donald Wood, Nigel Bruce, Donald Crisp, Henry O'Neill, Billy Mauch, Charles Croker-King, Phoebe Foster, Georgia Caine, Halliwell Hobbes, Eily Malyon, Montagu Love, Ferdinand Munier, Tempe Pigott, Barbara Leonard, Ara Gerald and Harry Cording. Directed by William Dieterle. Previewed Tuesday, July 7.

Fashioned with sincerity and dignity after the best pattern of biographical drama, it is, of course, inevitable that "The White Angel" should be described as a companion picture to the same producers' "Story of Louis Pasteur." There are, to be sure, much the same elements of appeal in both subjects, but it seems to this observer that in this faithful and respectful dramatization of the life and career of Florence Nightingale there is a closer approach to the substance and fiber of the historical plays in which George Arliss once was accustomed to be filmed.

Here are the same sources of conflict, for example, as were encountered in "Disraeli," "Alexander Hamilton" or "Voltaire," except that the effect is heightened and the emotional appeal rendered more poignant by the fact that in the instant case it is a woman who is pitting her courage and resourcefulness against the combined animosities and antagonisms of a smug and reactionary governmental and military machine.

A Lone Woman's Fight.

The story of Florence Nightingale, and by that token the story of "The White Angel," is one of an inspired woman's single-handed struggle to overcome the ancient prejudies of a rusty bureaucracy. Britain's military establishment in the 1850s had no place for women nurses. Male hospital orderlies provided whatever attention and care the wounded and dying of the battle fields might expect. Conditions were so deplorable that the death rate among the wounded was about 56 per cent.

Outraged by this condition, the gently bred daughter of a representative British family determined to do something about it. Rebuffed at every hand, Florence Nightingale still had the tenacity, the initiative and the fortitude to fight her way to the battlefields of the Crimea and there institute the reforms that reduced the death rate from 56 to 6 per cent and won not only the admiration of the English public and the world, but the personal thanks of her Queen as well.

It is the story of this monumental struggle that established the profession of trained nursing for women with which "The White Angel" concerns itself. It is told with directness, simplicity and dramatic power. the scenes of hospitalization at Scutari and Balaclava are grim in their realism and forceful in their testimony to the need of Florence Nightingale's heroic campaign against overwhelming odds.

No attempt is made to soften the horror of the conditions of gently bred Miss Nightingale encountered at the front. The climax of the play is lent greatness by the first of the trained nurses' recitation of the nurse's pledge as her plea to the Sovereign who accords her an audience at the picture's close.

Kay Francis' Best Work.

To the title role of this impressive recapitulation of a titanic struggle in the interest of humanitarianism Kay Francis brings an understanding grasp and sympathetic treatment. Her supporting cast contributes with unusual capability to the maintenance of the picture's indelible impression of honesty and dramatic integrity. Foremost among those who add to the forcefulness of a finely conceived picture of intelligent purpose must be named Ian Hunter, Donald Wood, Henry O'Neill, Halliwell Hobbes, Ara Gerald, Eily Malyon and Master Billy Mauch.

In productional values—costuming, settings, photography and direction—"The White Angel" is an admirable example fo the advantage of thoughtful and careful preparation.

The stage bill at the Earle this week, while not quite so somber as the screen attraction, still manages to perpetuate a considerable measure of the feature picture's uniformity of excellence.

Miss Hoctor Triumphs.

Harriet Hoctor repeated the triumph she has scored on many previous appearances in the Capital in two of her most effective choreographic creations—"Amour Coquette" and "The Raven"—the one danced in white, the other in black, but each the epitome of bodily grace and interpretative skill. The interval between Miss Hoctor's numbers is cleverly filled by two tap-dancing young women who seem to be embroyonic Eleanor Powells — or at least Eleanore Whitneys.

Matching Miss Hoctor in audience approval is that spry young octogenarian, Art Frank, assisted by Vivien Peterson, just back from Europe, in "Old Man Rhythm," Frank's familiar vehicle for his agile pastiming. His impersonation of a modern "torch singer" is a gem, as is his entire portrayal of the gay old dog on the loose, although some of his material is just a trifle on the shady side.

Also introduced by the gaily caparisoned Miss Audrey Sieber are the Five Juggling Jewels, a quintet of blond-wigged young women with luminous hoops and illuminated Indian clubs, and Jean Sargent, radio songstress, who scores in a cycle of well chosen numbers.

Newsreel and orchestral interludes complete a bill of superlative worth.

RKO-Keith's

"THE BRIDE WALKS OUT." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Howard Emmett Rogers, with screen play by P. J. Wolfson and Philip G. Epstein, featuring Barbara Stanwyck, Gene Raymond and Robert Young, supported by Helen Broderick, Ned Sparks, Billy Gilbert and Hattie McDaniels. Directed by Leigh Jason. Reviewed (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

A charming bit of cinematographic gossamer, contrived for no other purpose than to entertain, "The Bride Walks Out" has nobly achieved that end, going into a second week at a time when box offices are supposed to be lugubrious as the grave!

No one would have the audacity to confer upon this film any laurels of motion picture artistry, yet when one observes the wedded bliss (?) of Barbara Stanwyck and Gene Raymond and the helpful, but misunderstood, attentions of Robert Young, one just naturally forgets such trivia as Academy awards, camera angles and the like and revels in a grand comedy spontaneously performed.

To Helen Broderick and Ned Sparks—both of them dry wisecrackers de luxe—and Hattie McDaniels, adept in like manner, belong much of the oral pyrotechnics of the piece, although Miss Stanwyck does explode with something akin to her accustomed violence. The supporting cast is good.

The program is further embellished by an issue of Screen Snapshots, revealing a galaxy of Hollywood's famous and near-famous disporting themselves at Santa Anita; by "Bold King Cole," a clever Technicolor cartoon and by a release of the Pathe News.

Sylvan Theater

"PHAETON, SON OF PHOEBUS." The Dramatic Committee of the Arts Club of Washington, under the auspices of the Community Center Department, presents the Greek spectacle in four scenes by Miriam Bangs Hilton, directed by Marie Moore Forrest, with dances by the Marion Chace Group, costumes by Louise Wynne and Judy Lyeth, and lighting by Harold Snyder. Accompaniments by Lyman McCrarp, Margaret Tolson and the United States Marine Band, under the direction of Second Leader William F. Santelmann. At the Sylvan Theater. Reviewed Friday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST.

Phaeton.....Ben Smart
Epaphus.....Jack Perry
Clymene.....Maud Howell Smith
Phoebus.....Appleton Laurence
Jupiter.....Maurice Jarvis
Mercury.....Vernon Knight
Gods, Goddesses, Seasons, Muses, Graces, Fates, Hours, Warriors, attendants to Jupiter and Phoebus.

With a co-operative Nature silvering the lowering clouds with silent lightning, the fourth Sumer Festival Program was presented last evening before about 10,000 at the National Sylvan Theater, when the Arts Club production of the spectacle-drama by Miriam Bangs Hilton, "Phaeton, Son of Phoebus," was given its first public presentation.

As a brilliantly costumed spectacle, with its huge cast moving about more or less in time with the music—a large part DeBussey's "L'Apre Midi d'une Faune"—by the Marine Band, the evening was highly successful; yet, as a play, the possessor of dramatic potentialities, Mrs. Hilton's work fell short of the standard set by its elegant investiture.

Embellished with dances, which, per se, were sufficiently "aesthetic" and nicely done, the terpsichorean portion of the program did not accentuate the essential action of the story of Phaeton who, taunted by his friend, Epaphus, obtains permission to drive Phoebus' fiery steeds, which run away with the lad and result in desolation to the earth, a catastrophe ended only by one of Jupiter's potent thunderbolts.

As straight drama, the story failed to click. Whether it was due to lack of rehearsals or unfamiliarity with this particular parched stage, an indecision of performance was manifest which destroyed what little "action" is inherent in the drama.

Maud Howell Smith and Maurice Jarvis, as regal a pair as Washington theatricals has to offer, head the players in histrionics, with Vernon Knight describing the climactic ride in McNameean manner.

To Louise Wynne and Judy Lyeth for their grand costuming, to Harold Snyder for his superb lighting effects and to the Marine Band for furnishing the unusual accompaniment, especial commendation.

Preceding the spectacle, the Marine Band offered a concert which included the overture, "Phedre" (Massanet), "Praeludium" (Jarnethe romance and finale from Schuselt), "Phaeton" (Sant-Saens) and the romance and finale from Schumann's fourth symphony.

Culbertson on Bridge

Playing Safe.

At times players are forced to hair-line decisions that no degree of expertness, in fact nothing short of clairvoyance, can insure for correctness. What the British Bridge World magazine calls the "most discussed hand of the year" falls squarely into this category. It was played in a team-of-four match in England, the results on this one hand virtually deciding the match. The hand was:

West, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

♥ Q J 9 8 2
♦ 10 7 5

WEST
♠ A K Q J 10 8
♥ A 10 5
♦ Q J

EAST
♠ 5 4 3 2
♥ K 7 6 4 3
♦ None
♣ J 10 6 4

SOUTH
♥ None
♦ A K 9 8 6 4 3 2
♣ A Q 5

In one room the bidding ended at five spades doubled and, undoubtedly through poor defense, the contract was fulfilled.

In the other room the bidding was as follows:

West	North	East	South
2 sp.	Pass	3 sp.	4 di.
4 sp.	5 di.	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	5 sp.	6 di.
Pass	Pass	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

In fairness to the West player I must point out that he was not playing any of the American systems in which an opening two bid means an enormous hand. I am not quite sure what his two bid did mean, probably a hand containing about seven playing tricks and three honor tricks. At any rate, this is not the "hairline decision" I mentioned in my preamble. The important phase of the bidding revolves around the final contract.

Since West could not be certain of defeating the diamond slam (his pass evidenced the fact that he wasn't certain), a simple matter of percentage should have pointed out the safe course. West knew positively that he could not be slaughtered at six spades, since he was not vulnerable, whereas in passing to the six diamond double he was risking the loss of 1,500 points. Certainly he could not hope to defeat the bid more than one trick, which would have meant 200 points. Add to this latter amount the 300, or even 500 points that six spades might be set. Thus it will be seen that the possible gain from permitting the six diamond double to stand was 700 points, to the possible loss of 1,500.

And that is the guide to close decision!

At 3 a. m. we left Ben Marden's Riviera and drove back to Manhattan . . . Cool breezes whistled across the George Washington Bridge that spans the Hudson . . . South by east towered the stone battlements of New York, sweltering under a pall of thick, lifeless heat . . . I turned down Riverside drive, the dark surface of the Hudson occasionally pierced by the mastlights of big tugs . . . "This is the life," said the chorines in the rear seat . . . "I'd like to be on a big boat now," one of them blurted, "with somebody to wait on me, and no midnight show, and no sappy guys to paw at you" . . . The car now was purring down the viaduct that branches off from Seventy-second street . . . "All fellows are the same then?" I asked . . . "No," said the 19-year-old Bostonian, "they vary. "Those Britishers make passes, too," chilled the other . . . "Pawers are international?" I asked politely . . . "Yeah," was the acid topper . . . "Why I met an English lord once, and——" . . . A big boat in the harbor let out a deafening blast and the rest of the sentence was drowned out . . . "You were saying," I said . . . "That it is a very nice night," was the stony dismissal of my curiosity.

The car slowed down to a walk, for we were in the midst of Washington Market, which feeds New York's millions daily . . . This is the greatest wholesale market in the world, dwarfing those of Europe and South America.

Uptown, New York was fast asleep, but here were thousands of men laboring at top speed, unloading trains and trucks in a vast transaction that continues at staccato tempo for 12 hours . . . "This is exciting," said one of the chorines . . . "Yeah," said the other. "I never knew New York was like this—this is like a chapter from a book I read in school, I think it was 'Arabian Nights' . . . The other one giggled: "I always said you had read a book."

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

The last Congressional Record of the year comes off the Government Printing Office presses tomorrow and "Miss Jo," the jovial assistant to the public printer, says the session's job has totaled 11,300 pages.

Today's record has 182 pages in it, according to Miss Coffin.

But the Record, she pointed out, is one of about 60,000 different publications that the office prints each year, although it is one of the most important, and now that it is out of the way until the next session of Congress, there will be considerable lightening of the department's work.

"We print everything, according to some wag, from material on threshing machines to pamphlets about the love life of the frog," she said.

However, the most popular document handled by the Superintendent of Documents, where all the Government publications are on sale, is the famous baby book. This is a scientific treatise on the care of infants which finds its way into the highest as well as the most lowly homes of the country.

Another popular leaflet is the one on scientific raising of chickens, but a recent letter that reached her office stumped her, for a woman wrote in asking the Government Printing Office to send her five hens and a rooster.

We can testify as to the excellence of the newly reorganized cafeteria in the building, but Miss Coffin says she has put on 10 pounds since the change in management and that there "isn't a thin person in the building."

Paul A. Best, the administrative assistant to Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald, will resign his job soon to become assistant to James A. Moffett, former administrator and now chairman of the board of the newly organized California-Texas Oil Co.

Best's resignation is dated August 1 but he is taking a little vacation before he assumes his new duties.

In accepting Best's resignation, Administrator McDonald said he did so with regret. Best has been with Federal Housing just two years and came into the Administration in a small position and was advanced to administrative assistant last year. He is a resident of Florida and at the University of Florida took special work in business administration and law.

Tomorrow's weekly broadcast of the Smithsonian Institution and the Office of Education, "The World Is Yours," squeezes 6,000 years into a half hour on the air and tells the story of transportation. Kipling it was who wrote about "boots, boots, boots" and the Smithsonian and the U. S. Office of Education are talking about "wheels, wheels, wheels."

Weeks in the old-time stage coach have now become hours and Europe is closer to Washington these days than the Middle West and the present drought area used to be.

History has a way of recording strange events and it says that the wheel was invented 6,000 years ago and that more progress has been made in transportation development during the past century and a half than was made in the previous 5,000 years. Two-fifths of the world's railroad and four-fifths of the world's motor cars are in this country and the pioneer days in these fields will be among the stories in tomorrow's broadcast.

P. H. Dorsett who is retired from the division of plant exploration and introduction in the Department of Agriculture, was honored recently for the work he did while in the Government service as a plant scientist. He was presented with the Meyer Medal for distinguished service in plant introduction, a medal awarded at intervals by the council of the American Genetic Association. The medal is named in honor of the late Frank Meyer, pioneer plant explorer of the department, who originated the fund.

Dorsett now lives in Beltsville and made his greatest contribution to the country's agriculture between 1924 and 1927 when he brought together the largest collection of soybean varieties ever made. He is being honored for that accomplishment and for his plant exploration trips in many parts of the world. He was a member of two expeditions to China and three to Brazil and the West Indies.

Pick the winnah! All those who attend the first combined outing-picnic of the Federal Club and the Claims Division Club of the General Accounting Office this afternoon will have a chance to chose the prettiest bathing girl at the frolic.

A beauty pageant is to be the highlight of the outing at the rifle range at Camp Simms, Congress Heights, and this will be followed by a swimming meet and other sports.

So far there are 14 entrants for the honor of being chosen the loveliest mermaid but there are some shy ones who will not list their names in advance, but will enter the contest when it begins this afternoon.

Over 200 members of the two clubs will be there and, according to T. R. McMahon, in charge of arrangements, Camp Simms was loaned to the picnickers for the occasion by Col. John W. Oehmann, commanding officer of the District National Guard, because so many of the members are war veterans.

The Federal Traffic Club is composed of transportation clerks employed in the various Government departments and the other club is made up of G. A. O. employes.

Want to go fishing? Plans are being made for a fishing party by Labor Lodge, 228, of the American Federation of Government Employes, on July 18 and 19. The members are lining up automobile accommodations to take them to St. George Island, Md., on Saturday afternoon and return them on Sunday. The fishing will begin immediately upon arrival and in the evening there will be a camp fire on the beach. No telling what fish stories will unfold in that atmosphere.

Employment in the Government service increased during May, according to the latest figures from the Civil Service Commission. By the first of June there were 817,858 as against 810,418 in April on the Government pay rolls. Changes in the temporary agencies in Washington were few, but there were considerable additions here in Treasury, Commerce, Agriculture and the Veterans' Administration. The War Department's field force was added to with many temporary employes.

Persecution of Jews In London Is Charged

London, July 10 (AP).—"Real terror" among the Jewish population east of Aldgate in London as the result of Fascist anti-Semitic violence was described to the House of Commons today by the Laborite, George Lansbury.

He said Fascists were persistently insulting Jewish traders and inciting others to attack them. "Terrible reprisals," he said, might result.

Sir John Simon, home secretary, agreed police were confronted with difficult tasks in the East End, and appealed to persons who were attacked to co-operate with authorities.

Cheap Single Cheats Newsom of No-Hit Game, Tigers Bow, 5-0

Grim Business in Dugout as Newsom Stops Hit Wave in Heat Wave

First Baseman Joe Kuhel finds comfort between innings in a generous cake of ice applied to his face.

Shortstop Red Kress seeks relief from the water bucket heaped with ice brought from the locker room.

Kuhel, Too Ambitious, Misses Catch; Hurler Sweats Off 14 Pounds

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

On one of the unluckiest days of his life, Buck Newsom yesterday produced the most superbly-pitched ball game of the 1936 season. Unlucky it was because Newsom, sweating off 14½ pounds as he toiled against the Detroit Tigers in the 105-degree heat, was deprived of a no-hit, hall-of-fame performance by a cruel break of the game.

The big right-hander, striding back to the bench after each inning to be swabbed down with icy towels, held the Tigers to one hit and pitched the Nats to a splendid 5-to-0 victory, yet he is entitled to bemoan his fate.

Because only the infinitesmal margin of a wrong, but excusable, move by First Baseman Joe Kuhel separated Newsom from the immortality reserved for no-hit pitchers. The Tigers' lone hit was a tainted affair off the bat of the .289-hitting George Burns in the third inning.

Kuhel Too Ambitious.

Kuhel, with commendable ambition, but poor judgment, dashed far to his right to field the ground ball off Burns' bat. He was barely able to knock it down and it caromed behind Second Baseman Ossie Bluege. But had Kuhel remained on his bag, the play would have been a simple chance for Bluege.

Yet as the play was made, the official scorer could not rule that it was otherwise than a hit. And thus a hit that appeared so unimportant at that stage of the game was the hit that deprived Newsom of his bid for a place among the game's no-hit pitchers.

Newsom had joked about the heat in the locker room before the game. "I'm a hot-weather pitcher," he grinned at his teammates. Just for the fun of it he stepped on the scales, tipped 'em at 199½ pounds. One hour and 40 minutes later he was back on the scales, serious to learn how great had been his loss of weight. They showed a flat 185 pounds.

But out there on the mound, beyond mopping his brow with the sleeve of his uniform, Newsom was seemingly unconcerned by the broiling heat. The five men he struck out, he struck out in the third, fourth and fifth innings. Until the eighth, he had issued only one walk. But in that inning he appeared to wilt. Three men in a row he walked with one out, then escaped damage when Red Kress started a brilliant double play on Burns' scorching grounder.

Newsom was dealing chiefly in speed and a change of pace yesterday, abandoning his side-arm curve ball. Save for the second inning when he walked Goslin, the third when Burns made his hit, and the eighth when he was in serious difficulty, he disposed of the Tigers in one-two-three-order.

Nats Win in First.

Washington won the ball game in the first inning when they thumped Elden Auker for three of their 11 hits and two runs. Chapman's walk was followed by singles by Lewis, Kuhel and Stone against the underhanded Auker and the Nats had a 2-0 lead.

They knocked Auker out of the box with a three-run uprising in the third after Lewis led off with a single to right. With one out, an error by Rogell, who dropped Gehringer's throw to second, breathed new life into the rally. Travis followed with a hit that scored Lewis, and it was 5-0 after Bolton slashed a long double against the left center fence.

The aged Vic Sorrell came in at this point to stop the Nats' onslaught, but the game had already been won—and lost.

Yankees Riddle Tribe, 18-0; Get 4 Homers

Gehrig's 2 Circuit Drives Take Lead; Victors Get 20 Hits.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 10.—The Yankees took sweet revenge today on the Cleveland Indians, smashing out 20 hits, including 4 homers, to turn in an 18-to-0 victory behind Charley Ruffing's 7-hit pitching.

Humbled yesterday by Cleveland slugging, the New York "murderers' row" belted Tribe pitching all over the lot today, with Lou Gehrig setting the pace by poling out two home runs, his twenty-second and twenty-third of the season, to take the major league lead away from Jimmy Foxx and Hal Trosky.

Joe DiMaggio and Bill Dickey each smashed out one round-trip blow to follow Gehrig's pace.

The win, Ruffing's eleventh of the year and his third shutout, put the Yanks ten games in front of the American League pack again, since both the Detroit Tigers and Boston Red Sox, their nearest rivals, were defeated today.

Yanks Start in First.

The Yankees started their scoring in the first inning, and followed it up with run-making in all of the first five frames. Each of Gehrig's homers came with one on and were made off Lloyd Brown, in the first and third innings. The third-inning smash came during a four-run rally, in which Dickey's double, singles by Myril Hoag and Jake Powell, and a pitch that hit Frank Crosetti brought in the other two tallies.

In the fourth, the Yanks put on another four-run spree at the expense of Willis Hudlin, who relieved Brown. Singles by DiMaggio, Hoag, Powell, Tony Lazzeri and Ruffing and Bill Knickerbocker's error accounted for the scoring. Dickey's homer with two mates on base, brought in three more in the fifth, after which the Yanks wound up with four more in the eighth, with Red Rolfe's triple, DiMaggio's homer and Frank Crosetti's long fly doing the damage.

Klein's 4 Homers Set Mark, Win for Phillies

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 10.—Chuck Klein, slugging Philadelphia outfielder, batted the Phillies to a ten-inning 9-6 victory over the Pirates today by smashing out four home runs to set a new modern National League record for circuit blows in one game.

By pounding the ball into the rightfield stands in the first, fifth, seventh and tenth innings, Klein equalled the major league record and became the fourth player to do the trick. Lou Gehrig, of the New York Yankees, hit four homers on June 3, 1932. Bob Lowe, of the Boston Nationals, and Ed Delahanty, of the Phillies, both turned in the feat, but neither performance is listed in modern records.

The Philly outfielder, who batted in six runs with his wallops, came close to hitting another homer in the second inning when Paul Waner back up against the wall in rightfield to pull in his drive.

Klein's fourth smash broke a 6-6 deadlock in the tenth inning and proved to be the winning run, although the Phillies scored two more markers off Bill Swift in the extra frame.

Klein hit his first homer in the opening nning with two on base. His other three drives, which run his season total to 14, came with the bases empty.

Trailing by two runs in the ninth, the Bucs tied the score after Leo Norris booted a grounder that would have been the final out.

Klein, first up in the tenth, drove the ball into the stands to decide the game.

Bucky Walters, who relieved Claude Passeau in the ninth, was the winning pitcher and Swift was charged with the loss.

Al Todd, the Pirates' first string catcher, received a broken finger on his throwing hand in the sixth inning when struck by a foul tip. He will be lost to the Bucs for a month.

Dempsey Will Referee Ross-Furr Bout Here

By Bill McCormick.
A Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Va., July 10.—Jack Dempsey today agreed to referee the bout between World Welterweight Champion Barney Ross and District Welterweight Champion Phil Furr at Griffith Stadium in Washington July 22. Dempsey was signed by Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, of the Joe Turner promotorial enterprises.

Ahearn arranged the Ross-Furr contest, believed by most close observers of affairs fistic the most interesting boxing bout Washington ever has known, for the benefit of the summer camp fund for underprivileged children, sponsored by The Washington Post.

Not satisfied with landing a bout that Washington has been demanding for more than two years, Ahearn immediately sought to add greater interest to the encounter by seeking Dempsey as a referee for the engagement.

Dempsey at first declined the assignment. He gave as his reason that another child is to be born to Mrs. Dempsey at approximately the date of the Ross-Furr battle.

Ahearn refused to stop trying and today journeyed to Richmond, where Jack refereed a wrestling contest, in an effort to sign the former heavyweight champion.

"Lissen, Jack," he reasoned with Dempsey, "the first time you showed in Washington was just one day after your first baby was born. That child is doing very nicely, as is Mrs. Dempsey. Perhaps showing in Washington about the time your second child is about to be born, or just after it has been born, will bring you luck again. How about it?"

Dempsey, with the true belief of a natural fighter in doing over again the thing that once has worked successfully, considered but a few moments—then agreed to work the Ross-Furr engagement.

The erstwhile man mauler, who has been receiving between $2,000 and $3,000 for every appearance on the Southern tour which finds him here, asked Ahearn to name his own price.

Holding his breath, and secretly hoping that Jack would accept, Goldie quickly suggested $1,500, reckoning that Dempsey would draw at least five times that much money through the gate. Much to the surprise of Ahearn, Dempsey accepted without hesitation.

"Palsy-walsy," he confided to Goldie, "if you had suggested $750 I might have accepted. After all, Washington was lucky to me when little Joan was born, so maybe I would have paid you for the privilege of working there about the time another little Joan—or maybe John—is expected."

Ahearn feels the same way about Dempsey.

"Jack is good luck," he feels. "Every show he has been on in Washington has set a record. The first time—at my old Riding and Hunt Club—we turned away people. The second time—on the first police show—we drew $32,000. The third time—on the Canzoneri-Klick card—the gate receipts were better than $25,000. A guy like that not only is a great drawing card; he's lucky for promoters."

Welsh Is Bested In New Jersey Net Play

Parker Beats D. C. Star After Stiff Battle, 6—3, 4—6, 6—1, 9—7.

By the Associated Press.

Spring Lake, N. J., July 10.—Frank Parker went into the final round of the annual Bathing and Tennis Club Invitation Tournament today for the fourth consecutive year by defeating Bernard Welsh, Rockville, Md., in one of the stiffest battles he ever faced on local courts, 6—3, 4—6, 6—1, 9—7.

Parker will meet the winner of tomorrow's other semifinal set-to between Robert Riggs, Los Angeles, national clay courts champion, and J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, on Sunday afternoon, for the chance of gaining a first leg on the new Clifford Hemphill trophy.

Welsh, national public courts champion, came from behind a 0—3 handicap to capture the second set and then extended Parker with a blazing offensive in the final three games of the last set. The Maryland youth took a 7—6 advantage in the bracket on his own service.

Parker streaked away from his rival in the third set after a nip-and-tuck rally by suddenly breaking the pace of the match and cutting forecourt drops across the net that had his lanky opponent far off position. Welsh displayed a final flash of speed with three in succession to win his lone game of the set.

Parker experienced difficulty several times at crucial points by double service fault in the opening and fourth sets.

Robert Riggs, seeded No. 2 player, who is expected to meet Parker in the singles final, and his Hollywood partner, Wayne Sabin, took the measure of Harold Folk, Austin, Tex., and J. H. Braubach, San Antonio, Tex., 6—1, 6—0. The pair will meet Law and Gene Smith tomorrow, who defeated Robert Low, jr., and Harry Daniels, 6—1, 6—2. Robert Underwood and William Seward defeated Gardner Mulloy and Paul Guibord, 6—3, 6—3.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Don't laugh, but Buck Newsom credits a trick he learned from the pickaninnies in his native South Carolina with helping him to defy the heat and endure those nine broiling innings at Griffith Stadium yesterday when he turned the Tigers back with one hit.

Personally, I wouldn't have the face to report the incident here if I hadn't seen it with these very eyes, so I give it to you.

This Newsom person, absolutely unpredictable, literally tore a leaf out of the pickaninnies' book before he stepped out to the mound to face the Tigers. It was a fig leaf. The fellow had noticed 'em growing in the flower garden in front of the Nats' locker rooms, went out and plucked himself a huge specie of the plant and displayed it to his teammates.

"See this, men," he bellowed. "Well, this is what's gonna win for me today. It's gonna keep me cool, that's why," whereupon Newsom took off his cap, stuffed the leaf into it, returned his cap to his head, and explained:

"This is old stuff down South. Nothin' keeps your head cool like a fig leaf under your hat. We used to put 'em under our straw hats, me and the pickaninnies in Cah'lina, when we were out there pickin' cotton on my father's place. Nothin' keeps your head cool like a fig leaf. Watch me go, out there today."

POVICH.

Honest, folks, that's what that big Newsom did. He kept that fig leaf under his cap all afternoon and didn't care a fig for all those heavy hitters the Tigers were supposed to have in their line-up.

There was just a trace of bitterness in his voice as Newsom stepped back from his shower after his one-hit performance, lathered himself generously with suds, mopped his long, straggly and damp hair away from his eyes and inquired: "So that was a one-hitter, eh? I guess it just ain't in the books for me."

Whereupon the big fellow who had been separated from a no-hit game by a teammate's error of omission, disclosed that it was not his first experience at being yanked off the threshold of a no-hit performance as the door to pitching fame swung open.

"I missed out back in 1934 when I was winning all those games for the Browns," Newsom revealed. "Wes Ferrell was pitching for the Red Sox one hot day in St. Louis and we got 10 hits off him and Rube Walberg, but the Browns didn't get a run for me.

"They ran Ferrell outa the game in the third inning when he kicked on a third strike a shoved past him. He knew that Hornsby always ordered his pitchers to waste a pitch when the count was two strikes and no balls, and he didn't take his bat off his shoulder when I slipped a fast ball down the alley. He kicked because I outsmarted him and they put him out.

"Them Red Sox didn't get a hit off me for nine innings, but it was still 0-0 going into the tenth. Then I walked somebody with one out, they sacrificed him to second, and Roy Johnson dribbled a ground ball toward Alan Strange. It took a bad hop over Strange's shoulder, Johnson scored and I lose the ball game on that kind of a hit. Thass tough, you know?"

In Short—

Joe Kuhel felt downright bad about his play on the ball that robbed Newsom of his no-hit game, but Newsom wouldn't listen to any apologies . . . "What the hell, we won the ball game, didn't we?" he told Kuhel . . . Bucky Harris sympathizes with Kuhel's feelings in the matter . . . It was Harris' error at Boston in 1920 that cheated Walter Johnson of a perfect no-man-reach-first game against the Red Sox . . . Boston fans still hail Joe Judge's play on a hard-hit ball that saved the no-hit game for Johnson as the greatest fielding bit ever seen in the Hub . . . Both the Nats and the Yankees are operating with new sets of signals as a result of the trade of ake Powell for Ben Chapman . . . The Nats had no complaints against the umpiring on the bases yesterday . . . Brick Owen called Chapman safe at second in the first inning yesterday when he was apparently out by a margin of feet . . . And Bill McGowan waved Burns out at first in the eighth when Burns was already across the bag ahead of Kress' double-play throw to Kuhel . . . Clark Griffith cannot recall a big league ball game being postponed on account of hot weather . . . But the Nats played St. Louis two years ago with the temperature at 112 in the shade . . . Ossie Bluege fainted in the hotel elevator after the game.

Mrs. Pugh Triumphs.

Mrs. Gale Pugh won the ladies' nine-hole putting contest held yesterday at the Manor Club. The winner required only 15 putts. The runner-up was Mrs. John Hutchinson, who took 16 putts.

Risko-Steele Delayed.

Seattle, July 10 (AP).—Promoter Nate Druxman postponed the Babe Risko-Freddie Steele world middleweight championship boxing match here tonight because of rain.

He said it would be held, weather permitting, tomorrow night.

Girl, 15, Winner Of Jr. Golf Title

Detroit, July 10 (AP).—Edith Estabrooks, 15-year-old Dubuque, Iowa, high school girl, outstayed the 100-degree heat and a determined bid by Hope Seignious, 17-year-old Detroiter, to win the Western girls junior golf championship today, one up.

Even with par on the outgoing nine of the Oakland Hills course, the diminutive entry, who swept through the tournament with a championship brand of golf, led her opponent one up at the turn.

The little player, facing the last fairway one up, drove long into the rough and it appeared that the Detroit girl would square the match as her drive went straight down the fairway.

Miss Estabrooks' brassie shot left her still in the rough with a sidehill lie. With a remarkable recovery shot she hit the green and halved the hole for a par 5 and the title.

Tilden, 6 Other Pro Net Stars Are Suspended

New York, July 10 (AP).—Seven outstanding professional tennis players, including Big Bill Tilden, Ellsworth Vines and Vincent Richards were suspended today by the Professional Lawn Tennis Association of the United States, only a few days before the start of the professional championship tournament.

The suspensions were for violation of the sanction rule in performing at the Orange (N. J.) Tennis Club, the Clifton Tennis Club, of Staten Island, and the Pelham (N. Y.) Country Club.

Joe Humphreys' Booming Voice Is Stilled by Death at Age of 63

By the United Press.

Fair Haven, N. J., July 10.—Leather-lunged Joe Humphreys, whose booming voice introduced most of the world's greatest fighters during the last 40 years, died today at his home. He was 63 years old.

Seriously ill last year after a cerebral hemorrhage, Humphreys made a gallant comeback and returned to the ring to announce some of the important fights of the past six months.

But Joe—"The Beaut," as he was known to intimates—never fully regained his health. Even when he was back in the white glare of the spotlight he loved so well it was evident he was making his last stand. He introduced the principals for the Max Baer-James J. Braddock

Girls on Olympic Track Team Are Stranded On Verge of Hunger in New York, Can't Train

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 10.—Dee Boeckman, coach of the Women's Olympic trackfi and field team, disclosed today that some of the girls who qualified for the team are virtually stranded in New York and are on the verge of hunger.

"They are eating so little they can't train in this severe heat," she said.

"Some of the girls have used the pocket money they had saved to buy knickknacks in Germany after competing in the Olympics, to pay for food and hotel room, and now are living on sandwiches."

The woman athletes said they would be glad to take jobs temporarily, "as waitress or anything," to pay their living expenses until the Olympic competitors sail Wednesday.

The fund raised by the American Olympic committee to defray the Olympic athletes expenses is about $75,000 short of the amount needed.

The women's track and field team was plunged into deeper straits by the fact that their try-outs at Providence, R. I., were a financial "flop."

The committee arranged to pay the expenses of four women's track and field team competitors. For the other 13 on the team, appeals have been made to their home towns.

In previous years, the qualifying girls' expenses have been paid for the period in New York between the try-outs and sailing time.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 10.—Aella, a 6-year-old mare, which has been earning her way with regularity in the second flight turf competition, ran like a scared rabbit here this afternoon to lead all the way in the J. G. Brocator Purse, the feature race. With Jockey F. Cusimano, a Washington boy, in the saddle, Aella gave her backers no anxious moments and a payoff of $12.60 was in order. Vanvolva and Skyride were second and third in the field of six.

Skyride Favorite.

Skyride was the odds-on favorite of the group and was the victim of an unfortunate start. The 3-year-old was slightly fractious at the post and lunged sideways at the break in a manner which kept the assignment starter from releasing his grip on her bridle. When she finally did get away, Sammy Palumbo, who had the mount, put up a great, though foolish effort. He sent Skyride up along the rail and she ran like a wild horse. She bumped Justa Flight at the clubhouse turn and then moved on into contention. However, the hard usage told and she could not gain after reaching third position.

Won by 3½ Lengths.

Aella won by a margin of three and a half lengths with Vanvola two lengths ahead of the tiring Skyride.

Despite the hottest day of the meeting, some 4,000 were in the stands. Those who participated in the daily double stayed to see a mere $13.20 payoff on the winning combination of Truthfully and Abitibi, a pair of horses which were winning the first races of their careers.

Palumbo and Pikor each rode a winner during the day and they go into the final day of the meeting with Palumbo 2 ahead, and 46 and 44.

Chart of Charles Town Races

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, FAST.

FIRST RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:37. Off at 2:42. Winner, Mrs. R. M. Hess's ch. m. (5), by Golden Guinea—Dorothy. Trained by P. J. Maguire. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:19 1-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight

VEKESE S	(Hilley)	114	5	6	7¹	7¹	7³	8	3.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN DOT, $29.40, $9.80, $8.60; GEE SHARP, $7.20, $5.60; TRANSTINE, $8.00.

GOLDEN DOT forced the pace of GEE SHARP, dropped back slightly entering the stretch, and then came gamely under punishment to be up in the concluding strides. GEE SHARP was rushed to take command going around the first turn, was hard ridden throughout and just failed to last. TRANSTINE, a forward factor from the beginning, held on well in the final drive. PORTHVIEW MAID ran out at the turns and raced very wide throughout to be tailing gradually at the end. RUNANSTAY could not keep up after breaking on top. MAINS WANDER failed to rally after being in close quarters at the first turn.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:13. Off at 3:19. Winner, L. K. Crist's b. f. (3), by Bucellas—Truthfulness. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:50 2-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	Start	¼	Stretch	Finish	Straight
TRUTHFULLY	(Pikor)	111	3	5	3¹	3²	1²	$1.00

CHERAW ROSE	(Smith)	107	4	7	7¹	7²	7³	29.40
LOCH LONDON	(Garrett)	107	6	3	6²	6²	8	42.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRUTHFULLY, $4.00, $2.80, $3.20; SUN SWEEP, $4.60, $3.60; MARY E., $7.80.

TRUTHFULLY, fortunate to find racing room along the rail entering the stretch after being close up, withstood a drive to draw clear of SUN SWEEP in the final sixteenth. The latter was rushed along with MARY E., shook her off entering the stretch and continued gamely, but was unable to resist the winner. MARY E. rushed up to engage SUN SWEEP and tired slightly after leading on the swing for the stretch. NAHALLAC had no excuses. The others were outrun.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:46. Off at 3:50. Winner, H. A. Griswold's b. m. (8), by Trojan—Corpou. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:18 3-5.

SCOTCH AGE	(O. Hernandes)	109	2	1	1¹	1¹	1²	2¹	10.90
CEDARBROOK	(Cusimano)	109	7	8	7	7	4¹	3ⁿᵉ	8.50
FALMOUTH BELLE	(Tryon)	114	5	3	4ʰ	4ʰ	3½	4ᵒ	8.90
MABEL BEYOND	(Pikor)	114	8	4	3ʰ	3ʰ	5²	5ᵒ	16.80
EMPRESS JULIA	(Palumbo)	114	1	6	5½	6ʰ	6ʰ	6ᵒ	9.90
ASPINWALL GIRL	(Shanks)	114	3	5	6¹	5½	7	7	11.80
TODY CON	(Root)	109	4	7	Pulled up				5.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ABITIBI, $4.40, $3.40, $2.80; SCOTCH AGE, $7.00, $4.20; CEDARBROOK, $4.00.

ABITIBI, close to the pace of SCOTCH AGE from the start, rallied when put to a drive and held away after catching the pacemaker in midstretch. SCOTCH AGE was tiptoed to the front at once, was rated along, but could not cope with the winner at end. CEDARBROOK broke from outside the gates, was last going to the first turn, took the overland route and finished gamely. FALMOUTH BELLE was rushed into contention and was tiring in the final sixteenth. MABEL BEYOND had good speed for three furlongs.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $13.20.

FOURTH RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Fashion Queen from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:19. Off at 4:21. Winner, A. B. Miller's ch. m. (6), by Canter—Racket. Trained by G. A. Cook. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:21 3-5.

KHELABOO	(Terhune)	111	4	7	8	8	8	8	135.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANTERET, $10.80, $5.20, $3.80; ROQUEPINE, $5.20, $4.40; MISS TOUCAN, $6.60.

CANTERET, sent to the front coming out of the first turn, withstood repeated challenges from MISS TOUCAN, saved ground and barely lasted. ROQUEPINE, rated along while running in the pocket to the backstretch, came between horses in the stretch with a belated rush and would have won in another stride. MISS TOUCAN tired suddenly in the final sixteenth after forcing the pace. CASTLE CLIFF came willingly on the outside. FASHION QUEEN was virtually left at the post and closed a lot of ground.

FIFTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates for all but Sky Ride. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:47. Off at 4:49. Winner, Mrs. G. Hutchins' ch. m. (6), by Chatterton—Enslaved. Trained by E. Brining. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:25 4-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
AELLA	(Cusimano)	108	6	4	1½	1²	1²½	1ⁿ	$5.30
VANVOLA	(Root)	105	4	2	2¹	2¹	2³	2ʰ	6.40

JUSTA FLIGHT	(J. Hernandez)	112	2	3	6	6	6	6	10.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AELLA, $12.60, $5.60, $3.00; VANVOLA, $4.80, $3.20; SKY RIDE, $2.60.

AELLA forced to the front at the first turn, was rated along while saving ground, and easily held away to the end. VANVOLA, closest to the pace throughout, made repeated efforts to catch the winner, but was not good enough. SKY RIDE broke with an insistent starter holding her, was rushed into first turn along the rail, bumped JUSTA FLIGHT and galloped slowly thereafter. TOPSIE H. tired after being forwardly placed. JUSTA FLIGHT failed to rally after interference.

SIXTH RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:13½. Winner, J. E. Keyser's ch. g. (7), by Wise Counsellor—Bend Valley Maid. Trained by R. Mitchell. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:20 4-5.

WHITE CLOUD	(Garrett)	106	7	6	6½	6½	7ᵒ	8	24.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE MONEY, $4.20, $3.20, $3.00; GAY BRIDE, $4.80, $3.60; BRIGHT GIRL, $4.00.

WISE MONEY shook off TELL IT along the backstretch and fought it out willingly with GAY BRIDE and just lasted. GAY BRIDE, powerfully ridden, raced on the outside of the winner for the last three furlongs and just missed getting up. BRIGHT GIRL, slow to find best stride, came to the inside for the final drive and gained sharply before being blocked by the winner in the last 20 yards. TELL IT faltered after setting the early pace. DONATE closed gamely.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:46. Off at 5:46. Winner, W. S. Sweeney's b. f. (4), by Haste—Sly Glance. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:48 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OGLE, $4.80, $2.80, $2.60; GOLDEN SANDALS, $2.60, $2.60; DOUBTLESS, $3.00.

OGLE took command after opening furlong, was rated along thereafter, and was being taken in hand in the late stretch. GOLDEN SANDALS entered contention on the swing to the stretch and closed gamely, but was no match for the winner. DOUBTLESS moved up with a bold rush at the far turn, but hung thereafter. STEPEE went evenly. MR. MELVIN had early speed.

TIME OUT!

It was the proudest moment in your Dad's life—this was taken the day he got in the way of one of Bobby Jones' drives.

Dear Al: Charles Town, W. Va., July 10.

Racing Secretary Fred Burton has arranged a good program for the final appearance of the horses at this meeting. The card is topped by the Andrew A. Kelly purse, a test of a mile and a sixteenth, which has drawn most of the best routers in training hereabouts. Hot Cake, Jobakheta and Postponement are expected to draw the bulk of the wagering. Three other distance races and four sprints round out the program. One of the well-known horses here was lost the other night in a card game. Leon Garrett, the apprentice, has proven himself a smart rider in the last two weeks. He probably would have been in the thick of the battle for the jockey honors here had he not been suspended for 10 days on the opening day of the meeting. The $10 win tickets on Wise Money today had a picture of a skunk on them. But those who held them cashed in $21. BILL.

First race—Polly Plum may need a soft track but she is far too fit to be disregarded. She gets in light and draws Root, a winner. Radial, second on the also eligible list, is dangerous. Cantide has a chance at the weights.

Second race—Landsman will like this long route and will have Pikor to ride. I'm going to string along despite that 115-pound assignment. Spear appears to be the one to beat. Brown Hat holds some chance.

Third race—Noras's Grace is at tops now and needs only one scratch to get in action. Palumbo will do the riding and I see no reason for mistakes. Gaylass and Justa Teacher for the place and

Olympic Fund-Raising Situation 'Critical' With $75,436 Deficit

4 Teams Shy Money for Expenses

Final Tryouts to Open Today; Field Greatest; Records May Fall.

By Jack Cuddy.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

New York, July 10.—On the eve of final tryouts for the men's Olympic track and field team, Gustav T. Kirby, treasurer of the American Olympic committee, announced that the fund-raising situation was "so critical" that it still is uncertain how many of the 22 United States teams will be able to go to the games in Germany.

Following a lengthy meeting of the Olymic administration committee, Kirby revealed that the campaign to raise $227,000 showed a deficit of $75,436.10 in actual cash. Kirby emphasized that this deficit does not include an additional $50,000 for operating expenses of the Olympic committee during the next year nor $25,000 owed by the committee to the Olympic Association.

Promises of Funds.

However, Kirby admitted that his committee had promises of various funds and that it was hoping to receive an additional $30,000 from receipts at the Randall's Island men's tryouts tomorrow and Sunday. He said all except four teams had given assurances today of being able to raise before sailing time on Wednesday funds necessary to pay their respective teams' expenses. "But we have been getting assurances like that for the last six weeks," he added dismally.

The four teams which have no hopes of raising their remaining deficits are: Men's swimming, still shy $5,000; women's swimming, shy $3,000; fencing, shy $2,000 and men's field hockey, shy $3,000.

Meanwhile all of the 270 outstanding athletes from all sections were assembled in New York tonight and ready to start competition tomorrow at the new $1,000,000 Randall's Island Stadium in the two-day final tryouts for the remaining 59 berths on the men's track and field team.

Records Expected to Go.

Despite the record-breaking heat wave, virtually all competitors were reported in peak shape and the tryouts were expected to reach a new high in American track and field competition—with plenty of records expected to be shattered before dusk Sunday.

World record holders and world record breakers are competing in 12 of the 17 events on the program. Every heat of every race will be a duel of champions in this first Olympic track tryout ever held in the New York area.

There will be three finals tomorrow, with Jesse Owens, the great all-round athlete from Ohio State, seeking to spread-eagle the field in both the 100 meters and the running broad jump. An ensemble of beefy hammer throwers also will battle it out. Those are the only three finals listed for tomorrow. However, the 400 meters will be a final in effect, as the seven qualifiers for Sunday's final all will go to Berlin for that event and the 1,600-meter relay.

Owens to Face Stars.

Owens, who climaxed an all-winning season in the 100 meters last week-end by beating Ralph Metcalfe, of Marquette, at Princeton, will have among his opponents tomorrow such speedsters as Metcalfe, Sam Stoller, of Michigan; Mack Robinson, of Pasadena, Calif.; Eulace Peacock, of Temple, who believes he has recovered completely from a leg injury; Frank Wykoff, of Los Angeles, seeking a place on his third Olympic team, and Harvey Wallender, of Texas. Nineteen men are entered for this event. There will be three heats, two semifinals and the final tomorrow.

Chicago Beats Red Sox With Late Rally

Six Runs in Last Two Innings Breaks Boston's 5-Game Streak.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 10.—A six-run rally in the last two innings gave the White Sox an 8-to-2 victory over the Red Sox today, halted the Hub team's five-game winning streak and tied the series at one game each.

Vernon Kennedy went the route for the Chisox. He held Boston to seven hits, and although he gave ten bases on balls won his sixth game in a row and tenth of the season.

Johnny Mareum blew up in the eighth when Kennedy, Radcliff, Rosenthal and Hayes singled, giving the visitors three runs and breaking a 2-to-2 tie. The White Sox scored three more runs in the ninth on four hits and a bad throw to first by Marcum. Jack Russell finished for the home team.

Investigation Wins, 11-3; Watt Is Wildman

Possibly the heat didn't have anything to do with it, but Frank Watt, veteran pitcher for the Metropolitan Police, hit five men yesterday and walked seven as the Bluecoats absorbed an 11-3 defeat at the hands of Bureau of Investigation. It was the thirteenth win in 14 Government League starts for the G-men.

Women Swim Aces in Final Trial Today

18 Positions Available on Olympic Squad; 80 Will Compete.

By the United Press.

New York, July 10.—America's premier women swimmers, including a pair of Olympic champions and eleven national titleholders, begin final tryouts for places on the American Olympic team tomorrow in Astoria Pool.

More than 80 of the most attractive of all Uncle Sam's Olympic candidates will seek a maximum of 18 available positions—if there are sufficient funds to pay the way of that number. Chances are, however, the squad will be around 15 or 16 because of the fact that many swimmers will qualify in more than one event.

First Three Qualify.

Katherine Rawls, of Miami Beach, Fla., and Claudia Eckert, Wilmette, Ill., for example, will compete in four events—100 and 400-meter freestyle, 200-meter breaststroke and springboard dive.

With the exception of the 100-meter free style and diving, first three finishers in each event will make the team. In the diving, springboard and high platform, it still is indefinite how the stars will qualify, although it is believed the first two in each event will make the team and then double up in Berlin.

The first five or six, depending on the fund situation, will qualify for the 100-meter free style, with the 400-meter relay team of four also coming from that group.

Mrs. Jarrett Favorite.

Six events will be decided over the week-end, with all but two expected to produce close fights. Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett, of New York, is an odds-on favorite to take the 100-meter backstroke. Mrs. Lenore Kight Wingard, of Homestead, Pa., is a sure winner in the 400-meter event.

Another who looks safe is Mrs. Dorothy Poynton Hill, of Los Angeles, platform diving champion in the 1932 games. Opposing her will be Ruth Jump, Las Angeles, who won the national title which Mrs. Hill defaulted; Velma Dunn, Los Angeles; Ruth Hoerger, Miami, and Cornelia Gillissen, New York.

O'Neill to Pilot Indians in '37, Is Report

Cleveland Paper Brands Baseless Rumor Ruth Might Get Job.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, July 10.—The Plain Dealer says tonight that Steve O'Neill, manager of the Cleveland Indians since Walter Johnson's resignation last August, will pilot the Tribe again in 1937.

O'Neill and Alva Bradley, president of the Cleveland club, came to an agreement in New York yesterday, the Plain Dealer says.

This would stop rumors current since yesterday that Babe Ruth might receive the job.

"The Ruth rumor refused to die today in spite of the vigorous denial issued by Bradley," says the Plain Dealer. "From one source, thought to be reliable, came the story that the Babe had already come to terms with Bradley and would assume the reins at the end of the present season."

The newspaper said O'Neill expressed his gratification at the assurance that he would have another year in which to prove that the Indians are a good ball club.

"I've been disappointed in many ways this season" O'Neill was quoted as saying, "but I still think we've got the makings of a winning team. There are some things I hope to do before next season, and I'm glad to know Mr. Bradley thinks I deserve a chance to try them out."

heavyweight battle last year at the Garden Bowl, and received one of the greatest tributes ever given a third man in the ring.

His death was attributed to a complication of ailments—hardening of the arteries, apoplexy and heart disease—which were aggravated by the heat.

The last fight at which Humphreys introduced the principals was the Tony Canzoneri-Jimmy McLarnin bout in Madison Square Garden May 8. Among the other big fights he announced during the past year were the Joe Louis-Paulino Uzcudun, Louis-Carnera, Gastanaga-Carnera and Louis-Baer.

During the past year Humphreys' health slowly dwindled away. He suffered a mild brain hemorrhage in August, and shortly afterwards was taken to a hospital, where he remained in a semi-coma for some time. Only his son, George, was permitted to visit him.

Regained Health.

He made a courageous rally and regained his health sufficiently to return to his home. In mid-December, Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City sent Humphreys to his winter home in Miami, Fla., where he remained for several months and appeared in better physical condition than in several years when he returned East in April.

But Humphreys' health began to fail shortly after he returned home, and May 27 his condition became serious. From that date until his death late today, his life slowly ebbed and the fog-horn voice which could be heard in any corner of the building, no matter how large, dwindled to a faint whisper. He was in a semi-coma most of the time.

At his bedside were his son, George, his daughter-in-law and Mrs. Mike Jacobs, wife of the Twentieth Century Club promoter. His son is the only immediate survivor. He married Teresa Veronica Williams when he was 20, and she died in 1918. They had two sons, George now 27, and Joe, who died in 1933 at the age of 40.

During his last years Humphreys had lost most of the power of his famous voice and he walked uncertainly but he could command a crowd with his poise and bearing. Even when he had to be helped into the ring at some of the last fights at which he officiated, he could sway a crowd with his grotesque gestures and strident voice, helped by the "mike."

ven though the "mike" helped Humphreys during the last days of his career, he never liked the "mechanical voice" instrument.

Parched Corn Lifts Grains To New Highs

Barley Up 5 Cents; Wheat Corn, Rye 4⅛ Cents; Oats 3 Cents.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 10.—America's economic giant, the corn crop, totaling 2,244,000,000 bushels, reeled today from scorching heat, and prices shot skyward 4 cents, the extreme immediate limit.

Trade authorities reported that as a result of combined persistent drought and heat, Iowa, the Nation's banner corn-producing State, had little chance left now to raise in excess of 60 per cent of a normal crop. In excited dealings on a big scale, other grains rose with corn. Wheat and rye soared a maximum of 4⅛ cents, oats 3 cents and barley 5 cents.

Corn closed buoyant at full 4 cents gain, July 85⅝, September 83⅞, December 77½; wheat flurried, 3⅛-3⅜ up, July 109½, September 109¾@109⅝, December 110½@110¾ oats2⅜-2⅞, advanced, September 40@40⅛, and rye showing 3⅛-3½ gain, September 75@75⅛. In provisions, the outcome varied from 2 cents decline to a bulge of 20 cents.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent

Stocks and Commodities Continue to Advance in Active Speculation.

New York, July 10.—Stocks and commodities pushed ahead in more active trading and closing prices in nearly all sectors were at or near the top. Stock turnover was 1,600,000 shares, heat or no heat, the largest volume of business done since April 30, and the list also was the broadest in some time. Speculative bonds followed stocks. Some of the grains moved to the day's trading limits. September wheat closed 3¼ cents higher at 109⅜. Cotton was strong.

Financial markets continued under the domination of commodity trading. The hot, dry weather was the mainspring for keeping up the advance in farm products. Today corn was the most buoyant of the grain section. Meanwhile cotton gained momentum, and its rise is not connected with the drought. On the contrary the crop is reported to be in excellent shape. The motive force there is found to lie in the comparatively small acreage planted, the growth in consumption which removal of the processing taxes has brought, and the spread of the idea that a major forward movement in commodity prices is about to get under way.

Higher Prices.

People who this winter will have to pay a larger share of their income for grain foods, other vegetables and meats will have to thank the New Deal in part, and nature a little; but when the prices mount for cotton goods the blame will be entirely human. Granted that the mounting cotton prices are helping the prospects in the South, certain drawbacks must not be forgotten. One is the further damage high priced cotton will bring to our foreign trade in so far as cotton production in other parts of the world will be increased. Another is the drain on the Treasury to provide the doles for acreage not planted to cotton. Still another is the rise in living costs. Even 12 or 10 cent cotton was profitable enough for any planter who had any excuse for growing it.

If the rise in prices gains much further headway, plenty of bank credit will be at hand to handle the expansion. Cashing of the bonus checks helped to shove up excess bank reserves this week by $210,000,000, within sight of the old time peak. Currency in circulation continues high for the same cause, but bank loans, as reported by the Federal Reserve Board, were sharply reduced. That story can change quickly, and interest will hold in probable early action by the board in holding down or reducing excess reserves. The prospect of aid from gold exports is not particularly bright.

Turn in Francs.

Money markets gave no sign of any early change in rates, which indeed scarcely could move up without a drastic reduction in excess reserves and a considerable rise in demand for credit at the same time. Foreign currencies were moderately active.

Francs declined about two points, with sterling displaying a strong tone. The weakness in French currency was ascribed not so much to doubts about the response to the French Treasury's new "baby bond" issue—for it is a little early to gauge the results of that operation—but to precautionary selling on the eve of the French Bastille holiday, which will close all French markets next Monday and Tuesday. There is always latent fear that something unpleasant may happen over a prolonged holiday, and many Frenchmen apparently decided to lay by a supply of pounds against remote contingencies. At its low point the franc was far above the gold export point.

General Advance.

In stocks the advance was fairly uniform as to groups. Much encouragement was taken from the fact that the leading divisions—utilities, rails, steel and motors—were the strongest and most active. Gains of 1 to 2 points were the rule for the steels. Utilities led in volume. Water Works, Electric Power, United Consolidated Edison, Columbia Gas, National Power and North American were the favorites. National Power was the most active. Consolidated Edison sold at 40 for the first time in two years.

Sharp advances were made by Central, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Delaware & Hudson and the Chesapeake-Alleghany group. It was discovered all of a sudden that, after all, crops are good in the extreme Northwest and Southwest and, in fact, in most parts of the country, notwithstanding the hot weather. General Motors and Chrysler continued in demand, rising more than a point each.

Coppers and silvers worked moderately higher, but the gold shares suffered declines. Dome Mines and McIntyre lost 2 to 3 points. Fractions to as much as 3 points were gained in the rail equipment, motor accessory, amusement, rubber, mail order, farm implement and merchandising sections.

Loans and Margins.

With the idea spreading that we are likely to have a touch of commodity price inflation this autumn, speculators are waking up to the possibilities in stocks. Current statistics give no hint of what may be just ahead, for brokers' loans this week contracted sharply and commercial loans receded a little. That reflects water over the dam. With speculation rising in grains and margin requirements increased, the story to be told next week may be a much different one. The case is not one especially favorable for a reduction in margin requirements, and any lingering hope of relief for the brokerage business on that score probably was shattered anyhow by the admission of Chairman Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, that he had not bothered to read the report of the stock exchange on the subject. It is a 10 to 1 shot that he never will read it.

First Report.

The first quarterly report for the June period was published this morning by White Rock. Two others followed shortly. All three showed an increase in net earnings for second quarter compared with the same period of a year ago. That is expected to be the common experience of corporations in the last three months, and is counted upon by the bulls to lift the market out of its summer lethargy—if commodity price advances haven't already turned the trick by the time the quarterly reports arrive in large volume.

Steel Shipments.

Although the United States Steel Corporation, if it followed the course of the industry as a whole, stepped up to its operating rate in June, the total of shipments declined, even calculated on a daily basis, as compared with the total for May. It may have been that more work in June than in May was given to building up inventories, but in any event the layman would be informed of that afterward. The report on tonnage shipped, released to the general public at noon today, showed 886,065 tons for June, compared with 984,097 tons for May. The market had been prepared for the decline by the source through which a leak usually has occurred two or three days before official publication of the figures.

Treasury figures show the cash balance of the postal savings system almost to have doubled in the last few days, creating a new mystery as to the source of the funds. Authorities hazard the guess that some of the bonus money passed through the postoffices is finding a temporary resting place in the postoffices.

Sports Page Touch Urged For Finance

Same Vividness Needed in Corporation Reports, Chester Says.

Charlottesville, Va., July 10.—The financial reports of corporations to their stockholders need the dramatic vividness of the sports page, C. M. Chester, president of the National Association of Manufacturers and chairman of General Foods Corporation, told the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia today.

"Some of us should confess that we have confused dignity and the sobriety of our responsibilities with dullish reading matter," said Mr. Chester, after revealing a round table session of business men, financiers and college economists the results of two significant surveys made among 10,000 investors and 400 leading corporations."

"Shareholders' statements," he said, "should not be over-worded confusions of technical phrases. They should be written with the same vivid clarity and interest-compelling narration as the briskly told sports page story of a baseball game.

"What is a shareholders' statement but a dramatic account of a hard-fought contest against tax drains, competition, economic difficulties and production complications which the management wages on behalf of the spectators who, in this case, happen to be the owners as well?

The Box Score.

"Then, as in the baseball writer's article, at the end there should appear the 'box score'—the corporation's financial statement.

"Certainly there can be no more important or more genuinely dramatic news than the affairs of business and industry, upon which the majority of the country depend for its well-being."

Four out of 10 investors in a survey covering 10,000 stockholders, Mr. Chester said, "asked for more information regarding employe relations, indicating, I believe, the social consciousness of people who have a genuine concern about the well-being of others." The stockholders urged that corporations give investors more information regarding the effects of taxation and other legislation and about salaries and bonuses.

In a second survey made among 400 corporations, Mr. Chester revealed that of those who have thus far replied four out of five reported the number of stockholders had increased since 1929, and 20 per cent of the companies said stockholder attendance at meetings was greater than ever. Seven out of 10 companies reported they give no tax information on a per-share basis.

New York, July 10 (AP).—Cotton was somewhat less active today, but again made new high prices for the movement with October selling up to 12.78 and closing at 12.75. The general market closed very steady at net advances of 24 to 37 points.

Foreign Trade For Half Year Over 2 Billions

12 Reciprocal Pacts Now in Effect Held Factor in Expansion.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 10.—American foreign trade is making progress toward recovery in world markets at the mid-year turn, the National Foreign Trade Council and Association said today in a statement. The six months' trade, the council estimated, will reach a total of $2,300,000,000, with only a slight difference between values of exports and imports.

"The beneficial influences of reciprocal trade agreements are growing stronger," the statement said. "Only four pacts were in effect at the beginning of 1936, whereas eight more have since become effective. These agreements have created new and more profitable business. The benefits will be more pronounced as the pacts continue to operate."

While gains have been most prominent in exports of manufactured goods, agricultural products are generally showing up better, the council reported. Fruits, fresh dried and canned, and nuts, are all going forward in larger volumes and wheat flour indicates better progress. Meat products were said to be hampered by restrictions in foreign markets.

"American raw cotton," the report said, "although competing with new sources of supply, is meeting this competition with increasing success. As of June 30, exports of American cotton totaled 6,088,186 bales for the season as compared with 4,306,970 a year ago."

Iowa's G. O. P. Assails 'Waste' Of Democrats

State Rally Closes With Only 30 Present Due to Heat Wave.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, July 10.—Iowa Republicans in convention here today adopted a platform condemning the "reckless, heedless and unwarranted extravagance of Democratic administrations, both State and national."

Heat forced a walkout on the closing convention session, only 30 of 3,000 eligible delegates remaining in the convention hall to hear the reading of the platform and its adoption.

Convention enthusiasm reached its peak when Senator L. J. Dickinson, New Deal foe and candidate for re-election, told delegates the State would return to the Republican column next November in a campaign with "John Hamilton playing one end, Harrison Spangler the other, and Alf M. Landon carrying the ball."

The State platform of the party charged "disclosures of graft and corruption in high places and deliberate flaunting of moral and social laws under the present State administration."

On agriculture the party's plank followed closely the general lines of the national platform, advocating soil conservation, protection of the American farmer against importation of foreign agricultural products, low interest rates for farm loans and payment of "reasonable benefits" on the domestically consumed portion of exportable surpluses.

The convention demanded that control of relief administration be returned to local governing bodies, condemned "criminal waste of public funds by Washington bureaucrats," and criticized reciprocal trade treaties.

Scientist Spends Vacation Here To Read Lots of Dime Novels

Albert Johannsen, professor of petrology (rocks) at the University of Chicago, is having a grand vacation reading dime novels in the rare book room of the Library of Congress.

No idle reader is he. This is his third week in Washington, and he has been at it from 9 to 6 every day.

Out of his holiday a great bibliography of the Beadle publications (they put out the original yellowbacks both in covers and magazine serial form) is growing.

Johannsen said he read a few as a boy, still happens to have the first he ever read, "Eagle Guard, or the Enchanted Valley," by Eli Diadem, but doesn't delve for plot nor for thrills.

"I'm interested in them as a phase through which this country passed in literature," he said. "We've grown out of it now. However, they did much less harm to children than some of the modern pulps."

Besides pursuing dime novels, he's always after duplicate plates of the original steel engravings by Phiz, illustrating Dickens—of a possible 525 he now has all but 17.

Having taught about rocks for a quarter of a century at Chicago, and having written numerous text books on them, his philosophy now is: "Let the younger fellows have the field, and let me have my fun."
